PALMER AGAIN TRIES TO ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Second Plot Detected Before He Had Made Much Headway.

LACKING IN GRATITUDE

Sheriff Hurley Permitted Prisoner Liberty of Corridors During Hot Weather—Now Has Him Locked in Steel Cell Day and Night.

Joseph Palmer, the prisoner who on July 1, attempted to escape from the Centre County jail by digging through the massive stone wall, on Saturday, last, made a second attempt, which also was foustrated. Palmer will now be confined in a steel cell, twenty-four hours a day, until he is called for trial on the fourth Monday of September.

Palmer did not make as much progress in his second attempt to break jail as in the first before he was detected by Sheriff Hurley and Deputy Sheriff Rees. On the occasion of his first attempt he had dug his way through the wall of his cell before being discovered. It subsequently developed that Bert Campbell, another prisoner, was also in the scheme and that both expected to escape. When the plot was exposed each prisoner blamed the other for inspiring it.

Whether one or more other prisoners were in the second plot to break jail is not known, although indications are that at least one additional prisoner had knowledge of what was going on. When Palmer made his first attempt to get away Sheriff Hurley removed him to a steel cell. Out of pure humanity, Sheriff Hurley allowed Palmer the freedom of the jail corridors during the extremely hot weather. As things turned out, however, Sheriff Hurley's sympathy was not rewarded by gratitude on Palmer's part, the latter, instead, having at once started in to plan a second scheme to escape. This was nipped in the bud.

Palmer used the cell of another prisoner as his point of operations in the second attempt. He had removed a section of the plaster covering the stone wall in endeavoring to find a spot which would offer the least resistance in digging. He had nothing but an ordinary case-knife with which to work, but handicapped as he was he had the plaster removed and was ready to dig through the wall when he was detected. Sunday was the time he had picked out for digging through the wall, anticipating that it being a holiday there would be fewer jail officials on duty and hence less danger of detection. Sheriff Hurley and Deputy Rees were on the job, however, and much to Palmer's disappointment he was caught. Deciding to waste no additional sympathy upon Palmer, Sheriff Hurley locked him in a steel cell and informed him that he would remain there until his trial.

Palmer, it is known, once escaped from a prison in West Virginia. It is supposed that his repeated attempts to break jail here are due to his fear that the West Virginia prison officials will learn of his whereabouts and secure a requisition for his removal to that State. Jail-breaking in West Virginia is rewarded with a severe sentence, and it was to avoid re-capturing that Palmer took such desperate chances to gain his liberty. As has been explained in "The Republican," Palmer is under arrest here for a trivial larceny charge originating at Monument.

Advertising at a Fire.

One of the cleverest things in the way of catching the public eye was pulled off yesterday by Harry Levin, of Buffalo, N. Y., who is directing the bankrupt sale at Claster's. The fire alarm was sounded, telling of the small blaze at the John Witmer home, on Willowbank Street. Mr. Levin happened to have standing in front of Claster's store a wagon decorated with banners announcing the bankrupt sale. Jumping into the wagon he drove rapidly to the Logan Hose Compony house. There he had a hose cart hitched to his advertising wagon and in the next minute he was off to the fire with his horse going at a gallop. He beat the firemen to the scene of the blaze and everybody along the way couldn't help but notice the glaring advertisements of the sale that starts today at Claster's. It was a bit of enterprise that speaks for itself.

No Change in Borough Millage.

Bellefonte borough Council, on Monday night, last, approved a recommendation of the Finance Committee fixing a 14 mill tax rate for the present year. This is the same millage as was in force last year. It is apportioned as follows: 3 mills, borough; 5 mills, interest; 6 mills, street.

MONSTER TROUT DEAD

Was in Big Spring and Measured 28 Inches—May Have Had Cancer.

The monster trout that has been such a wonderful attraction at the big spring died on Sunday last. A running sore on the back of the huge fish supposedly caused its death. The trout measured 28 inches and weighed 7 1-4 pounds. It was the largest trout known to be in waters of this section of the State and attracted scores of visitors to the big spring.

The trout was placed in the spring five or six years ago. About that time there was a heavy flood, causing unusually high water in the dam at the Yeager swing factory. The trout, to escape the high water and the sand and gravel accompanying it, made its way to the edge of the over-flow. It happened to rest in what proved to be a shallow pool when the flood subsided and was unable to escape. George Waite, Charlie Heisler, the late Samuel Rine and several others happened to be nearby and discovering the trout easily captured it. They placed it in the big spring, where it at once became the talk of all who stopped to see it. So much was the trout talked about because of its immense size that knowledge of its presence in the spring traveled far and wide.

A few months ago Todd Rine, who is in charge at the water works and spring, noticed that a sore had developed on the trout's back, near the head. The sore, while quite small at first, quickly spread and soon extended to within two inches of the trout's tail. By some it was believed that the sore was a cancerous affection, but no one has thus far been able to definitely determine that point. On Sunday the trout appeared to be sluggish and during the day it died. News that it was dead soon became known and many persons flocked to the spring to see the trout, which had been removed from the water by Mr. Rine and placed in his office in the water works. It is possible that the dead trout will be mounted.

The death of the biggest trout in the spring has called attention to what is apparently a similar disease with which three or four other trout are afflicted. One of the number measures about 21 inches. Each one appears to have a sore on its back, and as was the case with the big trout, the sore seems to be gradually spreading. Mr. Rine is endeavoring to capture the diseased fish, fearing that the disease may contaminate the water which passes from the spring to the reservoir and from there is pumped into the homes of Bellefonte. The trout are so quick and elusive that their capture is exceedingly difficult. However, Mr. Rine is hopeful that every diseased fish may be caught and removed from the spring within the next few days.

ELECT NEW PASTOR

Bellefonte Presbyterians Choose Rev. George Hawes, of Braddock.

At a congregational meeting, following the regular morning services in the Bellefonte Presbyterian church, Rev. George Hawes, of Braddock, was elected pastor to succeed Rev. Dr. J. Allison Platts, who several months ago removed to Wilkinsburg. Mr. Hawes was among seven ministers whose names were voted on during the meeting. He received 83 votes, the next highest vote polled being 53. The third highest candidate received 14 votes, the fourth highest candidate, 5 votes. and three candidates 1 vote each. Mr. Hawes therefore received a plurality of 30 and a majority of 8, the total vote cast being 153. William B. Rankin, clerk of the session, and Thomas Beaver, representing the Board of Trustees, will this week formally notify Mr. Hawes of his selection. In the event of his acceptance the call will then be submitted to the Huntingdon Presbytery for approval.

Mr. Hawes recently preached a trial sermon in Bellefonte. He is at present pastor of the United Presbyterian church at Braddock. In the event of his acceptance of the call extended by the Bellefonte congregation he must first enter and qualify as a pastor in the Presbyterian church. The exact time when Mr. Hawes will come to Bellefonte is not known at present.

Tyrone Band at Hecla Park.

It is not improbable that the Pennsylvania Railroad band, at Tyrone, will be engaged to play at the business men's picnic at Hecla Park, Tuesday, August 22. A rattling good baseball game is to be scheduled, the teams being the best in this part of the State. Announcement of the program of attractions will be made in "The Republican" next week.

Centre and Clinton County veterans are today holding their annual outing at Agar's Park, near Lock Haven.

FRANCHISE ORDINANCE GIVES MAXIMUM RATES

New Light, Heat and Power Co. Measure Read in Council.

CHARGES COMPARED

How Proposed Rates Compare with those of Bellefonte Electric—Franchise Ordinance Calls for Service by January, 1913.

The proposed franchise ordinance, granting to the promoters of the Scootac Power Company the privilege of transmitting and selling within the borough of Bellefonte electricity for lighting, heating and power, was read in Council on Monday evening for the first time. The measure was introduced several weeks ago, but was referred to committee without being read. Since that time it has been amended at length, the chief amendment being the incorporation of a section specifying maximum rates, which are to continue in force for at least fifteen years and which are as follows:

Maximum price for arc lights of ..... hundred candle power is hereby fixed at the sum of fifty dollars per annum.

Maximum price for commercial lighting at the sum of eight cents per kilowatt.

Maximum price for power for commercial purposes at six cents per kilowatt.

In order that the public may have an opportunity to compare the rates in the proposed franchise ordinance and the rates charged by the Bellefonte Electric Company, "The Republican" has secured from the latter their charges, as follows:

Maximum price nominal 2000 candle power arc lights, $66 per annum.

Maximum price commercial lighting, 10 cents to 6 cents, per kilowatt.

Maximum price commercial power, 8 cents to 4 cents, per kilowatt.

The rates in the proposed franchise are subject to change. Council, at the direction of President Harper, referred the ordinance to Borough Solicitor Mitchell with instructions to confer with representatives of the company. Burgess Bower suggested that the maximum rate for commercial lighting be not more than seven cents per kilowatt. It is not improbable that other changes will be incorporated.

The ordinance sets forth that the franchise shall be granted to "Luther M. Patterson, Trustee for Fred Kreamer, H S. Satterlee, H. T. Hall and others, incorporators of the Centre County Light, Heat and Power Company, to erect and maintain poles and wire for the transmission of electric current for the purpose of furnishing light, heat and power." Just who are the "others" comprising the "Centre County Light, Heat and Power Company" has not been made known up to the present time. Should any member or members of Council be in any manner connected with the company they would, of course, be legally barred from voting on the franchise ordinance. Thus far incorporation powers have not been granted the "Centre County Light, Heat and Power Company," and so far as is known, formal notice of intention to apply for a charter has not been advertised within Centre County. Mr. Patterson, who is named in the ordinance as a Trustee, is one of the promoters of the Scootac Power Company. That company has secured franchises in Lock Haven and is applying for franchises in Williamsport and Milton. Thus far nothing has been done in the way of constructing a plant. The explanation of the promoters is that they are waiting until they have all desired franchises in hand before going ahead with the building of their proposed plant.

The ordinance sets forth that "said company shall compete said pole and wire line, and be in position to deliver current on or before the first day of January, 1913, or all the rights and privileges granted by this ordinance shall by such failure immediately lapse and become null and void."

The company is required to enter bond in the sum of $5,000 to indemnify the borough against any loss or damage which it might suffer by reason of the improper or negligent performance of work, compliance with the provisions of the ordinance, etc. The borough is to be further indemnified for claims for damages that may arise from the construction, maintenance and operation of poles and wires.

It is required in the ordinance that all poles shall be painted and placed in alleys wherever possible. The erection of poles along Linn, Allegheny or Bishop Streets is prohibited. Wires may only be carried along these streets by means of conduits, and in the event of the construction of conduits the company is required to restore the streets to their original condition.

KEICHLINE JABS AT FORTNEY AND JOHNSTON

Squire Jolts Democratic Rivals for District Attorneyship.

FRIENDS UP IN ARMS

Indignant Over Letter Written by Democrat Recently Defeated for Justice of Peace and Who Now is Enjoying Sweet Revenge.

Squire J. M. Keichline, one of several Democratic aspirants for nomination for District Attorney, this week issued a letter to voters in which he takes a few left-handed jabs at J. Kennedy Johnston and D. Paul Fortney, rivals for the same place on the ticket. The Keichline letter has stirred up no end of ill feeling among the friends of Johnston and Fortney and promises to become a factor in the already badly muddled Democratic situation.

Keichline raps Fortney because the latter is a young man. He does not rap him first-handed, but makes the thrust through Fortney's father, D. F. Fortney. Johnston, however, is flayed right and lelt. Keichline roasts him for aspiring for the District Attorneyship while still holding the office of tax collector. Behind the attacks on Fortney and Johnston is the sweet remembrance by Keichline of how certain Democrats in Bellefonte defeated him for re-election as Justice of the Peace. At that time, it will be recalled, a number of Democrats worked openly at the polls against Keichline. His letter soliciting votes for him for District Attorney is not only an effort to help Keichline but a clever tossing of bricks at both Fortney and Johnston; a killing of two birds with one stone, as it were.

In his letter Squire Keichline very modestly and gracefully announces that he has not the slightest objection to becoming the next District Attorney of Centre County. This announcement is reeled off so innocently that one naturally expects the next paragraph to reveal some of the notable achievements of the doughty Squire. But the next paragraph doesn't do anything of the sort. Other paragraphs attend to that part, and in rattling good shape, too. The second paragraph takes this fling at young Mr. Fortney, through his father:

"I was a candidate for this office (District Attorney) some years ago and was defeated for the nomination by D. F. Fortney, Attorney, on the grounds that he was OLDER than I, and that he HAD MORE PRACTICE IN THE CRIMINAL COURTS THAN I HAD. I took my defeat in a good-natured way, supported the ticket, and said to myself: 'I guess HE IS ENTITLED TO THE NOMINATION and I must be satisfied with the verdict.'"

All of which is to let it be known that Mr. Keichline is an older man, has had more practice in the criminal courts and in every way more entitled to the office of District Attorney than young Fortney. The latter, while indignant at the thrust at him by one of his own party philosophically takes the view that he couldn't help it that he didn't get started earlier in life and that perhaps some young lawyers, himself included, are better than certain older ones.

It is the brick hurled at Kennedy Johnston by Squire Keichline that has aroused no end of factional feeling among the friends of the two candidates. The beautifully clever part of the Keichline plan of attack is that he does not so much as mention Johnston by name. He adroitly allows the recipients of his letters to suddenly recall that Johnston is a tax collector, that he has duplicates to collect, and, of course, no tax collector should want to also be District Attorney. This is how Squire Keichline proceeded in giving the Johnston candidacy the carefully planned jolt:

"I was offered the nomination for District Attorney at the time that J. C. Meyer was the candidate. Mr. Meyer came to my office and said that the party wanted me to take the nomination; that I was entitled to it for the faithful work I had done in the past for the party. I told him that I was ineligible for the nomination—that I was tax collector for the county and borough duplicates, and that I had filed my bond to collect and settle said duplicates; that I could not be collector and District Attorney at the same time, and that I could not resign my office as tax collector, as I had my old duplicates to collect and settle. Mr. Meyer then said: "I will accept the nomination if you do not," which he did—was nominated and elected with a large majority, and surprised the people

DEATH ENDS HONEYMOON

Irvin D. Jordan, Married Less Than Three Months Ago, Dies at Howard.

Married not quite three months ago, Irvin Dillinger Jordan, a popular young business man and telegraph operator at Howard, died at his late home at that place on Friday, evening, last. His death was caused by internal hemorrhages. Mr. Jordan was not quite 28 years of age. He was a splendid young man and his untimely death has caused the keenest sorrow among a large number of admiring friends. The grief-stricken young bride has the heartfelt sympathy of the community, death having taken away her husband in the very threshold of their married life.

It was on May 17, last, that Mr. Jordan and Miss Zelma Yearick, of Howard, were married. The wedding day was one of supreme happiness, the young couple being surrounded by countless friends who showered them with wishes for a long and prosperous future. Following a brief honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan returned to Howard, the groom being employed there as third trick telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania Railroad. He also conducted a small store, and with these two sources of income he and his bride confidently planned for the future. Just when all seemed brightest, however, Mr. Jordan's health failed and on Friday evening, at 9.10 o'clock, he passed away.

Funeral services were held on Monday, interment being made at Jacksonville. The services were conducted by Revs. Mr. Faust, Runkle, Schmidt and Crow. Deceased was born at Fairmount, Nebraska, September 2, 1883, making his age 27 years, 11 months and 2 days. His family at present reside at Fruitdale, Alabama. His young widow will continue to make her home at Howard, residing there with her parents and conducting the little store so recently managed by her late husband.

At the funeral the casket-bearers were the same six young men who served as ushers at Mr. Jordan's wedding, as follows: Arthur M. Long, Albert Pletcher, Willard Yearick, Chester A. Moore, Charles Bower and Ronald Welch.

JESSE WOODRING DEAD

Was Well Known and Successful Farmer Near Port Matilda.

Having lived to the age of 74 years, 5 months and 12 days, during which time he achieved prominence in his community and success as a farmer, Jesse Woodring died on Friday night at his late home near Port Matilda. His death was not wholly unexpected, for he had been in failing health for some time. So well was he known and liked by all who knew him, however, that the news of his death was received in sorrow by a wide circle of friends and admirers. In the passing away of Mr. Woodring there was brought to a close a life that had been rich in usefulness to others and one that will long be held in reverent affection by those to whom it served as a guide and example.

Mr. Woodring was a member of the well known Bald Eagle valley family of Woodrings and a brother of County Commissioner Jacob Woodring, who possesses many of the fine traits which so endeared the former to his friends. Jesse Woodring was born February 23, 1837, on the old homestead farm, near Port Matilda. While still quite young he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Conrad, of WarriorsMark, and to their union eleven children—nine sturdy sons and two daughters—were born, as follows: H. C. and P. B., of Port Matilda; Mary, wife of Chester Pringle, of Port Matilda; Nancy, wife of John S. Gray, of Stormstown; D. E. Pennsylvania Railroad station agent at Milesburg; W. W., of Janesville, Wisconsin; Archibald B., of Tyrone; M. J. and Z. I., of Philipsburg. Surviving also are two brothers, Jacob and Aaron, and one sister, Mrs. John Wining, of Port Matilda.

Mr. Woodring was a devout Christian gentleman and a man of sound integrity in business affairs. He was an active and consistent member of the Presbyterian church. Testifying to the universal esteem in which he was held was the large attendance at the funeral services, held from his late home on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

CAPT. RUNKLE RESIGNS; DISCORD ON SCHOOLSHIP

Former Bellefonte Boy Gives Up Command of Training Ship.

TROUBLE IS NOT OVER

Friends of Captain Runkle Claim He Quit When Board of Directors Refused to Support His Efforts to Enforce Necessary Discipline.

As a result of discord among certain officers on the Schoolship Adams, Captain George P. Runkle, of Bellefonte, this week formally resigned as commander of the boat. The matter has been given considerable publicity by the several Philadelphia newspapers, the climax of a sharp exchange of comments between the Board of Directors and Captain Runkle being a statement by the latter in which he hinted that the prices paid for supplies for the schoolship might need probing. The schoolship sailed on Tuesday on a cruise to Nova-Scotia under a new commander, Captain Runkle remaining on shore.

Captain Runkle, when he turned in his resignation, demanded a full and searching inquiry of his management of the schoolship. It has been known to his friends here for some time past that discord existed among the officers on the boat, Captain Runkle claiming that at least one of the under-officers refused to submit to the rigid discipline exacted. From what may be learned, Captain Runkle refused to continue in command of the boat unless the Board of Directors sustained him in his efforts to maintain discipline. The Philadelphia "North American" on Wednesday published the following article, telling of the latest developments in the controversy:

With the sailing yesterday of the Pennsylvania Schoolship Adams came new complications in the tangled situation precipitated by the sudden resignation of Captain George P. Runkle on the eve of the cruise to Nova Scotia. Captain Runkle had been threatened with exposure of his shortcomings if he did not keep silent by Captain Richard B Williams, President of the Board of Directors and Deputy Surveyor of the Port.

After he had explained his reasons for quitting the schoolship, followed by his challenge for a full and searching investigation, Captain Runkle declared it would be well for Captain Williams to make no more threats.

"I am not a reformer," said Captain Runkle, "that is, I am not a reformer in the sense of meddling with the duties of others. I have been with the nautical school for sixteen years, with the exception of a short period during the Spanish-American war, and have always endeavored to do my duty. As far as my authority extended, I saw that every thing was handled in an honest and straight-forward manner. But, beyond that point I had nothing to say. However, in sixteen years a man may see many things that he does not talk about.

"As commander of the schoolship it was my duty to be certain of the correct weight or quantity of supplies delivered aboard and be sure as to the quality, but I had nothing to do with the price, excepting during a cruise.

"When I resigned as commander of the schoolship I had the right to express why I took that step. I would have added nothing to that explanation had Captain Williams, president of the board, not threatened me. Naturally, as I had nothing to conceal, I asked for a searching inquiry. If Captain Williams is not eager for an investigation it would he wise for him to remain silent in the future."

Captain Runkle added that as he is not anxious to cause trouble, he will not insist upon an investigation. But it was reported yesterday that other influences are at work to bring about a thorough sifting of the affairs of the nautical school.

Captain Williams, after declaring that it was not his mission "to tear down or destroy character," said that Captain Runkle's charges had been investigated and found groundless and that no further inquiry will be necessary.

"We have sent Captain George F. W. Holman out in charge of the schoolship with full authority to dismiss any officer who is incompetent or insubordinate. He will not have to wait until the board acts.

"If Executive Officer Charles C. Platt is found to be at all like the description of him given by Captain Runkle, Captain Holman can discharge him. If, at the end of the three months of the cruise there is no trouble aboard, it will satisfy us that the departure of Captain Runkle puts an end to the cause of discord. We have always thought very well of Captain Runkle, and we are sorry that there has been this unpleasantness.

MAKES FOR EDUCATION

United States Senator Page Believes in Boy Scout Principles.

United States Senator Carroll S. Page believes that the Boy Scout movement is leading in a line of educational work and character-building eventually will be approved by Congress through legislation. Before becoming interested in the Boy Scout Movement he made a study of the methods of educating boys and girls in different countries and now has introduced a bill in Congress to provide for the co-operation of the Federal government with the States in encouraging instruction in agriculture, trades, industries and home economics in secondary schools, state normal schools, colleges and universities. Such a bill would call for an appropriation of millions of dollars. The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America and Senator Page will doubtless co-operate in working for this bill because they feel that the Boy Scout principles are along the lines of the measure.

Speaking of his measure and the Boy Scout principles Senator Page says: "I am especially interested in the better education of the boys and girls of our land and my bill is in such entire harmony with the work that you are trying to do, that I have thought it best to send it to you. My theory is that after a boy has come to the age when he must become in part a bread-winner for the family, that he ought to be examined carefully by expert methods and the line of work ascertained for which each particular boy is adapted.

"I have no doubt that a boy scout is a better equipped man by far when he reaches the age of 18 or 21 than a boy who has not had the benefit of scoutcraft instruction.

"My idea is that the general government should blaze the trail for the states in such a way as to lead up to a fairly decent education in agriculture for the boy who decides to be a farmer, and in trades and in industries for the boys who design to be merchants or mechanics, and it should fit the girl with a practical education on home economics so that she becomes a better wife, a better mother and a better housekeeper.

"How much of the boy scout line of education could be introduced into the educational work which my bill provides for, may be a matter of doubt, but that they are in harmony and work along kindred lines together, cannot, it seems to me, be questioned, and it occurs to me that scoutcraft work could be very materially benefitted by the splendid equipment which scoutcraft would give."

Wheat Growing

The general practice in this community among farmers is to grow wheat in a systematic rotation of crops, but the McClellans, in Potter township, digressed from this practice to such an extent that their method attracts attention, says the Centre Hall Reporter.

About thirty-five years ago the elder Joseph McClellan, now deceased, purchased and began farming the McClellan homestead, at Tussey Sink, west of Tusseyville. One field of ten acres on the opposite side of the road from the building appeared to him to be especially adapted to growing wheat. The field was repeatedly sown to wheat, and for several years in succession wheat followed wheat.

Harry A. McClellan became the father's successor on the farm, and put into practice more extensively his father's methods. In the thirty-five years the McClellans have been farming, this particular field has been sown to wheat not less than twenty-five times, and there have been no fall crops prior to this season, when the growing grain was almost wholly destroyed by the Hessian fly.

The most remarkable feature of this little story about a wheat field bordering on Tussey Sink is that the crop destroyed by the fly was the seventh crop planted in succession, and the field is now plowed and being fitted for the eighth wheat crop in as many years.

For Tanned Skin.

A good summer lotion that will remove tan and soothe sunburned skins is made of three parts of witch hazel and some of alcohol. The alcohol coaxes out the fire from the burn, and the witch hazel keeps the alcohol from smarting. The lotion is delightfully cooling and soothing, and it keeps the sunburned flesh from stiffening and blistering. Wash it out thoroughly in pure water immediately after the sea bath.

THE "GOOD FELLOW"

His "Friends" Generally the First to Desert Him in Adversity.

Every now and then we hear of some one dying in bitter poverty after having spent a fortune in "being a good fellow." Of such a one it is commonly said while he is alive and spending that he has a "heart like an ox and a hand always deep in his pocket;" he is spoken of—frequently within his own hearing—as a "prince among men," or "one of nature's noblemen."

It seems passing strange that a man with the power to attract to himself so many warm friends should not have any willing to pay his funeral expenses. Yet such is often the case. It is a fact frequently commented on by philosophers that these peerages of cafe creation die with the fortunes that produced them. A real "prince among men" or "nature's nobleman" loses his title when his money ceases to burn holes in his pocket, after which he should set aside a little money for his own obsequies.

But those who argue from the forlorn and friendless passing of one of these "good fellows" that there are no real friends to be had in this world are wrong. Every one can make friends, and stanch ones too, by the practice of unselfishness, but not by wasting money on the worthless in the vain hope of being considered a "good fellow," which is merely another name for a complete fool.

It is not he who "gives to every one who asks," but he who seeks out those who are too proud to ask and relieves their necessities, who awakens genuine gratitude and attaches to himself the sort of friends that are worth having. Such a man, however, is seldom termed "a good fellow."—New York Herald.

Trousers May Supersede Skirts

"Equality," there is no heading it off in this day of enlightenment and emancipation. It pervades all ranks and both sexes. The last distinctions or wealth, birth and physical variation, are giving way before it. Every custom, belief and statute must render an account of itself and prove that it not merely cumbereth the around.

Not the least manifestation of this mighty change is the demand by an organization of working women that they be allowed to wear trousers, because they need the pockets for practical use.

"Skirts are in the way," says one advocate of this dress reform. "Imagine how much more free a woman would be if she worked in trousers. Just let a man try skirts and see what he would do. The reform can not be worked by a few. It would result as the attempt of Mrs. Bloomer did and bring ridicule on the wearers. Such a movement must be en masse or the result of gradual evolution in woman's dress. See the mothers who are dressing their girls in bloomers. See the women who are wearing divided skirts in sports. This is the beginning only."

In the light of these remarks we must regard the wearers of the harem skirts as exemplars and pioneers, as martyrs, if you will, instead of persons more or less daring and indiscreet. Consciously or unconsciously they were blazing out a new trail.

Though the harem skirt retired from the field almost hastily, perhaps it accomplished its work by familiarizing the conservative mind with the bifurcated idea. Public opinion may need "breaking in," as an untamed young equine does.

Trousers with pockets in them would doubtless be a boon for womankind. Their deprivation of pockets for so long, even in their gowns, must have led to a sense of inconvenience almost approaching desperation. The handbag is a makeshift. Women wish to use their hands for other purpose than portage.

There is a vast eruption of new ideas, new modes, new everything; the social world is slipping from its moorings. We know not what a day may bring forth, but we shouldn't be in the least astonished to see it bring forth—pantaloons.

THANKSGIVING SCARE

New England Predicts Shortage in Turkeys and Cranberries.

A thankless Thanksgiving Day is what is in prospect for people of moderate means who consider turkey and cranberry sauce a necessity for the proper observance of the day. The Cape Cod cranberry crop is reported to be practically ruined as a result of the long drought which has prevailed in that arm of Massachusetts, which produces a large part of Uncle Sam's normal $2,500,000 crop of the tart berries. Blossoms in the bogs have wilted to such an extent that the Cape Cod wiseacres say there will be less than a quarter of the average crop.

And that isn't the worst. Reports from Rhode Island, Connecticut, Vermont and other New England centres of turkey culture say that this year's crop of the Thanksgiving birds will be decidedly short, and that unless other turkey States come to the rescue there won't be half enough birds to go around.

How to Cook Taught Through Mail.

When we give the matter our intent thought, we perceive that it should not be reason for astonishment that any one should acquire the art of broiling a beefsteak scientifically through a correspondence school.

In the testimony given in a St. Louis Court a witness made the frank declaration that she learned by mail how to prepare a steak faultlessly for the table, at which those present marveled greatly and were quickly convinced.

But have we not the evidence of the cook books that thousands acquire culinary adeptness from the printed word? If one may triumphantly set before the company "Sally Lunn" and "gooseberry fool" concocted from the recipes, certainly written instructions on the manner in which to most satisfactorily broil or fry a steak will do as much.

You have only to begin at the beginning in any formulary. "Take one pound of flour"—what is difficult or cryptic in that? "The whites of six eggs beaten together to a froth." No extraordinary feat there, even if the required frothiness is laboriously brought about on a tea plate by means of a table knife, in the old-fashioned methods of our grandmothers, who knew not the modern appliance of an egg beater.

It is true that all the recipes in the world will not make a superior cook, where the taste or inspirational cognition is absent, but the simpler dextrousness can be learned by rote; no one need be so low in the scale of cookery that he must boast of his aptitude for scrambling eggs. Any intellect can achieve a tolerable pan of soda biscuits in time; allowing for the mastery of the art of mixing and a familiar experience with the temperature of the oven.

It might be a valuable accomplishment if every one were instructed in preparing the less complex dishes for h! nourishment. Every man his own cook in this age of vanishing cooks. Personal service in the household is decadent. If we all knew how to flip a flapjack, we should not grieve so deeply when the cook departed without notice leaving only a few cold boiled potatoes and the remains in the breakfast sausages imbedded in the skillet surrounded by their pale, clammy, congealed lubricant.

Summer Exercise.

Success in most outdoor sports depends upon how well one can breathe. Breathing exercises are the most valuable. A reason for acquiring this habit in the summer is that away on the mountains or by the sea one can avail oneself of the purest most highly "oxygenated" air obtainable.

Practice the following Yoga breathing: Close the left nostril and breathe through the right during eight seconds; close the right and exhale forcibly during two seconds through the left; inhale through the left during eight seconds; exhale through the right in two seconds.

It is highly important that the lungs should be filled with air in these breathing exercises and that the breath should be retained during the period in which we can count slowly from six to twelve. Then the exhalation should be gradual, say exhale, pause, count two, exhale a little more, count two, and so on. The muscles of the lungs will be strengthened and their capacity greatly increased in proportion as the air is first retained and then completely exhaled.

Breathe deeply at all times, but especially upon rising in the morning, and have the clothes loose enough to allow the ribs plenty of expansion. Pressure on the diaphragm makes violent exercise almost impossible.

Hay Fever, Asthma and Summer Colds.

Must be relieved quickly and Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will do it. E. M. Stewart, 1034 Wolfram St., Chicago, writes: "I have been greatly troubled during the hot summer months with Hay Fever and find that by using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound I get great relief." Many others who suffer similarly will be glad to benefit by Mr. Stewart's experience. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Mother's Bedtime Story.

Once upon a time there lived a king and queen who had only one daughter, whom they called May Blossom.

The day the child was christened they invited all their friends and relatives to a large party, and also all the wise fairies to endow her with gifts. There were thirteen of these fairies, but the king forgot and only asked twelve.

So the feast was going on splendidly when suddenly the thirteenth fairy appeared, very angry because she was slighted, and, without noticing anybody, she cried out that the child should pinch her finger with a spindle when she was 15 and die.

Every one was much frightened at this, but one of the other fairies stepped forward and said she should not die, but fall into a deep sleep for a hundred years.

Then everybody felt better, and the fairies bestowed the usual gifts and went away.

When the princess approached her fifteenth year the king had every spindle in the kingdom destroyed, but on the princess' birthday she happened to come upon an old woman spinning and asked what she was doing.

When the woman told her the princess thought she'd like to try it, but the minutes she touched the spindle she pricked her finger and dropped onto a couch in a deep sleep, and the old woman vanished.

Everything and everybody also fell asleep, and a thick hedge of thorns sprang up around the castle, so no one was able to get in.

As time went on many princes heard the story and tried to cut their way in, for the fairy had said that whoever should waken the princess would marry her; but as fast as they cut it it grew up thicker, so they had to give up.

So it went along till one day a stranger prince came that way, and when he heard the tale he determined to win this lovely princess. What was his surprise on coming to the hedge to find it covered with flowers that gave way to him as he passed in.

Within he found everything sound asleep. He climbed the steps, and after exploring most of the castle he came to the room where the princess lay sleeping.

The instant he saw her he fell desperately in love with her, so surprised was he at her beauty, and, falling on one knee, he kissed her.

Instantly she awoke, and with her the whole household and everything in it. At the same time the high thorn hedge disappeared entirely from view.

The king and queen rejoiced that the long sleep had not been death, and were thankful to the prince for disenchanting them.

So he and the princess were very happy, and in due time the marriage was celebrated with great splendor.

Backache is kidney ache.

If you neglect the kidneys' warning,

Look out for urinary trouble—diabetes.

This Bellefonte citizens will show you how to go to the rescue.

Mrs. John Fisher 51 S. Water Street, Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did three years ago when I gave a public statement in their favor. A member of my family procured Doan's Kidney Pills from Green's Pharmacy Co. and received prompt and permanent relief through their use from an attack of kidney complaint. I have also taken Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and pain through my kidneys and they have always had the desired effect. You are welcome to publish this statement."

Torturing eczema spreads its burning area every day. Doan's Ointment quickly stops its spreading, instantly relieves the itching, cures it permanently. At any drug store.

Things Nobody Knows.

There are many strange facts about animals which no one has ever seemed able to understand or explain. Here are a few of them.

A fly will crawl to the top of a window pane, fly back to the bottom and crawl up again. Hardley ever does it fly up and crawl down.

Hens scratch for food always with the sun behind them, so that its rays will reflect on the tiny seeds. Yet a blind hen, for whom the reason does not hold, always manages to get the sun behind her also when she scratches.

Cats hardly ever lie with their feet to the fire. In most cases they lie instead with their left side turned towards it. But dogs invariably lie with their forepaws to the fire.

A mouse overlooks a perfectly safe food supply, sufficient for a meal or two, to enjoy the perilous pleasures of an unlimited store. It will hide near the food and come out to nibble when it is hungry, for it is not true that a mouse runs to its hole at the first alarm.

Liquid Cures Eczema Where Salves Fail.

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMES OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D. D. D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 25 cents trial bottle will start the cure and give you instant relief.

The Raddason Robbery

Story of a Novel Entertainment

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"A very neat job," commented Detective Fenn as he finished his inspection of the Raddason house after the robbery.

"A cleanup for me," grunted Hiram Raddason. "After this careful inspection of the premises I suppose you have some theory to advance, Mr. Fenn."

The detective frowned at the millionaire victim of the jewel robbery, and then his frown changed to a smile, for it would never do to antagonize this man who had employed him and who had promised him a personal reward of a thousand dollars, besides his professional fee, if he recovered the stolen jewels. Nevertheless Detective Fenn was reluctant to confide his theories to any one.

"Well, sir," he said patiently, "to sum up what I have gathered, you say you retired last night about 11:30 and that the jewels were placed for safe keeping under your pillow. You were all alone in the house for the reason that your wife and family are at your country home and you merely stopped here for the night, as you were in town for the purpose of getting the jewels from the bank to take to Mrs. Raddason. You say you found the caretaker absent and decided to remain here all night, as you were too tired to go on to a hotel.

"You went to bed after assuring yourself that the house was without any other occupant than yourself. You are quite sure that you did not miss some closet in your search?"

Mr. Raddason shook his head positively. "I tell you, Fenn, I did not leave a corner uninvestigated. I began at the wine cellar and went up to the garret, and there was not a recess or closet, a curtained doorway or a piece of furniture that I did not peer behind or under or poke at with my cane. Can't fool me on that. I'll swear there wasn't a human soul in this house last night save myself when I went to bed."

"And you heard no unusual sound during the night?" asked Mr. Fenn.

"Not a sound from the time I dropped off to sleep until I awoke at 7 to find the jewel case gone from under my pillow."

"Didn't feel dull or stupid as if a drug of some sort had been used to keep you quiet?" pursued the detective.

"Never felt brighter in my life," assured Raddason. "Put my hand under my pillow for my watch, looked at it and then recollected the jewel case. It was gone."

"Can't understand why they didn't take the watch, too," mused Detective Fenn.

"That's another funny kink in the matter. Every door and window in the house locked as snug as you please, and yet the jewels disappeared. Chain up on the front door and the other doors locked on the inside. What do you make of it?" Mr. Raddason looked down at the thin, wiry little man before him with skeptical eyes.

"There isn't a clew to hang a theory on," declared the detective frankly, "nothing except the trapdoor to the roof. You noticed that the hook was unfastened on the underside?"

"Yes, but this is a detached house, and there is no way a thief could make a getaway from the roof."

"Thieves used to go about their business on Shank's mares, didn't they, Mr. Raddason? And after automobiles came into fashion you read about them going off into the country and making their getaway in a motorcar. Well, what would you expect of the thief of today, eh? The latest thing in transportation, of course." The detective smiled at his employer knowingly.

"An aeroplane, by Jove!" ejaculated Mr. Raddason.

"That is my idea," admitted the detective modestly.

"And a very clever theory, too," admitted Raddason genially. "Now, Mr. Fenn, if you have no objection just give me an outline of how you believe the robbery was accomplished."

"It's soon explained, sir. The crook knew of your intention to get the jewels from the bank, possibly trailed you from your country place, where he might have had a pal in your employ; was sure you had 'em in the house, waited till you got to bed and asleep, lit on the roof with his machine, came down and got the jewels, skipped up through the skylight and into his flying machine and so away."

"My dear fellow, that's a pretty theory, but how many crooks would risk discovery by turning off a job in such a conspicuous thing as an aeroplane? How many men of that class could afford to even hire one of the machines, much less find a mechanician to operate it for him. You're dreaming, Fenn. Five—ten years from now and I'll believe that."

"Very well, Mr. Raddason," said the detective without displeasure. "I'll just stay around the house today and chase up a few clews. You'll be here yourself?"

"Until 4 o'clock. I have to catch a train to Redmount then. Investigate all you want to. You'll find me in the library."

"Very good, sir."

From cellars to kitchens and servants' quarters, all through the drawing rooms, shrouded in summer coverings, prowling around on his hands and knees, poking into dusty corners, peering into the most unsuspected places, went Detective Fenn.

It was a baffling case. Detective Fenn admitted that to himself as he sat on the side of the banker's bed to rest from his labors. If he could discover the thief he would receive the $1,000 reward, and that $1,000 would purchase the little home in the country which he and his wife had long planned for. James Fenn was a private detective, and the news of the robbery had not yet gone forth to the newspapers.

"I've simply got to earn that thousand," groaned Detective Fenn. "But how?" He glanced wildly around the room in which he had not discovered the slightest clew so far, and his eyes fell on a pair of bedroom slippers near his feet. They were large slippers and apparently the property of Mr. Raddason; an elaborate pattern was embroidered in beads on the velvet slippers, but some of the threads were broken and the beads were slipping off. In fact, Fenn noted here and there on the light carpet some of the rose colored beads that formed the flowers, and farther on near the hall door there were some green beads.

Interested now, he slipped to his hands and knees and followed the trail of the dropped beads. He brought his light and his magnifying glass into constant play as he moved slowly down the length of the velvet carpeted hall to the foot of the stairway that led to another floor of bedchambers.

Now and then he came upon a dropped bead, sometimes green or white or pink, on a stair and along corridors, sufficiently numerous to give him a definite clew to follow. Up a second flight of stairs he followed the trail of the beads until a group of several brought him to a standstill at the foot of the ladder leading to the trapdoor in the roof.

"That was the weak point in my theory of the flying machine," he murmured to himself as he climbed the ladder. "I couldn't understand how the dickens that chap knew the trapdoor would be unhooked from within. It's clear enough now!" He chuckled softly as he pushed up the trap and emerged to the red painted tin roof.

The noon sun glistened on something bright, and he bent to discover another bead.

"Ah!" smiled Detective Fenn, shading his eyes with his hand and looking away off to the blue haze which marked the rural district where he had planned to have a home some day. "Looks as if that home isn't so far off, Eliza!"

One, two, three, four, five, six, seven beads led Fenn in a zigzag line to the foot of one of the four chimneys of the house. This chimney, unlike the others, was topped with a large galvanized iron hood that effectually prevented any drafts from entering the unused flues. A little hinged door on either end made it possible to occasionally use the chimney without removing the iron hood, but now these little doors were closed.

Detective Fenn's penknife pried open the nearest door, and the sunshine fell inside the opening and lighted up the sooty cap of the chimney. There resting on the narrow brick ledge was a paper wrapped parcel which unfolded in Fenn's hands into the Raddason jewel case. The jewels were safe inside.

With a long drawn sigh of relief and a parting wave of his hand at the distant country, Detective Fenn scurried down the stairs and stopped before the library door to regain his breath and to appear as nonchalant and cool as a detective is supposed to feel at critical moments. Then he pushed the door open and entered the room.

Mr. Raddason looked up with a slight smile that broadened to laughing dismay when he saw the parcel that Fenn carried.

"Caught me, eh?" he chuckled, holding out his hand for the jewel case. "Well done, Fenn. I thought I had you fairly puzzled. I used to read detective stories until I got tired of their plots, so I invent 'em myself now and watch some sleuth like you work 'em out before my eyes. It's worth a thousand easily to me. Tell me why you abandoned your flying machine theory."

"It really wasn't a theory, Mr. Raddason. I just mentioned it because I couldn't think of anything else at the moment. You did it very cleverly, sir. You did leave a patch of soot on the sleeve of your pajamas which I could not understand until I found the beads that you lost from your slippers. By the way, sir, you did wear the slippers last night when you went up on the roof to conceal the jewels?"

Mr. Raddason nodded. "I didn't know the beads were being scattered. So I left a trail of evidence as I went along, eh, straight to the chimney?"

"Yes, sir."

The millionaire wrote a check for an amount that covered a generous fee as well as the thousand dollars special reward and gave it to the detective. "I'll confess I ought to have found a better hiding place, Fenn," he said ruefully. "The next time I set you a problem it'll be one that keeps you guessing for awhile! Come out now and have some luncheon with me."

"Thanks, Mr. Raddason, but I've got to meet Mrs. Fenn. We're going to look at a little place in the country we're thinking of buying." And as the detective hurried away he looked far happier than the millionaire who had planned this fictitious jewel robbery to afford himself some hours of amusement.

Broadway and the Strand.

Broadway, New York, is the more or less exact counterpart of the London Strand. It is actually broader, but it appears more narrow because the houses are so much higher, and it is a little straighter because it is a made road, not a road evolved from what was once a path along river mud. The general effect is identical. There are the same kinds of shops and a crowd of the same type passing to or from the business quarter of the city. But, as I have said, one rubs one's eyes looking out at the crowd upon the sidewalk. It is the Strand crowd—cosmopolitan, varied, people touching one another so closely that the tops of their heads appear to form another tier on the street, a tier paved with hats instead of wood blocks or granite sets. There it is, the crowd. But it appears to stop still. In one's first astonishment one thinks that all these people are waiting for a procession to pass. One cannot believe that they are the procession. Nevertheless as the slow trolley passes onward one realizes that the crowd is actually in motion—that it is the thing itself, not the procession. It is an extraordinary shock, this first impression of the land of hurry.—Ford Madox Hueffer in Atlantic.

Victor Hugo's Golden Gift.

A Paris chiffonnier makes a living of a sort, and he sometimes in overhauling the dust bins comes across a find. In this respect a Paris contemporary relates a capital story of Victor Hugo. A little silver gilt souvenir spoon which the poet valued very much disappeared. Through the carelessness of the maidservant it had found its way into the ash bucket and in due course into the hands of the chiffonnier who practiced in the district. This worthy succeeded in getting the poet to awake from his reveries and to descend from the lofty heights of Olympus—in other words, his study—to receive back the lost spoon. Hugo was delighted to get back his souvenir. The author of "Hernani" was never a prodigal, so he rewarded the chiffonnier by presenting him with a copy of his "Les Chansons des Rues et des Bois," saying, "There, my man; you will find in it as much gold as is contained in any jewel case in the world."—London Globe.

Guarding the Bank of England.

The Bank of England's nightly guard is drawn from the guards stationed in the Tower of London. The custom of providing a little garrison of guards for the Bank of England every night dates back to 1780, the time of the Gordon riots. The troops are made very comfortable in the bank, and the officer in command is provided with a dinner for himself and two friends. Of course an allowance of wine, satisfactory from both points of view, is made. The vaults of the Bank of England would make fine robbing. They frequently contain fifty millions sterling. Several keys are necessary to open the lock to the whitewashed vaults, and each key is in the possession of a different person. The gold lies piled on trucks to facilitate removal or is heaped against the walls in sacks.

Legs That Hear.

One of the strangest and most unexpected of the uses to which we could imagine a leg as being put is that of an organ of hearing. Yet such seems to be one at least of the functions of the fore legs in the cricket. On the outer side of the tibia a small oval space may be seen, in which the strong armature which covers the rest of the body is reduced to a thin and membranous condition, making thus a sort of window or drumhead. Communicating with this, inside the leg, are the ends of a nerve, and it can hardly be doubted, therefore, that he whole apparatus constitutes an auditory organ.

A Curious Boat.

According to a Chinese legend, there lived in Canton 200 years before Christ an artist named Lim Kao Poung, who won an immortal reputation owing to the fact that he was able to fashion out of a bean pod a boat, complete with rudder, sails, mast and all other necessary appurtenances. Moreover, on the exterior of the boat were engraved various maxims by Confucius. For this masterpiece, it is said, the Emperor Tsi Fou paid him 1,000 taels.

Proposed amendments to the Constitution submitted to the citizens of this Commonwealth for their approval or rejection, by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and published by order of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in pursuance of Article XVIII of the Constitution.

Number One.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:

That section six of article five be amended by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 2. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8.—The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

JUST WHAT WE EXPECTED.

The "Democratic Watchman" predicts that "The Republican" will be disappointed in expecting that the "Democratic Watchman" will put up a courageous fight for local Democratic control. "The Republican" begs to explain that we will not be one bit disappointed. We did not need this additional evidence that the ex-secretary of an imaginary State Committee is notorious for "cold feet."

UP TO THE COMMITTEE.

On the eve of the meeting of the Democratic County Committee nobody seems quite able to say whether Chairman Kimport is to be indorsed or repudiated for his action at Harrisburg. His friends in the committee hope for the former, his enemies for the latter. If the reorganizers carry out their threats the committee will on Tuesday next be forced to go on record as in entire harmony with or flatly against the element in the Democratic party in the State which have turned against the Guffeys, the Halls and the Dewalts. In other words, the reorganizers are demanding a show-down. The Jim. Cornellys, the Johnny Nolls and the P. Gray Meeks want a vindication at the hands of the County Committee, but they prefer getting it without a test of strength. They tried to club Chairman Kimport into refusing to line up with Guthrie for State Chairman but failed, thus taking a conspicuous place in the class which the "Democratic Watchman" properly labels "would-be generals." Fearing that they are in the minority they hesitate to tempt a test of strength in the County Committee. Their hope is that the committee will meet, hurriedly dispose of such routine business as may come before it and then adjourn. Adjournment without action one way or the other in regard to Chairman Kimport would then be heralded by them as virtually a repudiation of his course at Harrisburg. Friends of Chairman Kimport say, however, that they will not walk into such a trap and that if he is to be repudiated the committee alone must do it, and do it in the open.

The argument that the County Committee should take cognizance of the acts of Chairman Kimport would appear to be well founded. Chairman Kimport's vote for Guthrie for State Chairman was not the vote of an individual but the voicing of what was represented by him to be the sentiment of these for whom he spoke, namely, the County Committee. He either did or did not voice the sentiment of the majority of the committee. If his vote for Guthrie in preference to the Guffeys, the Halls and the Dewalts, was in accord with the wishes of a majority of the committee he deserves a vote of indorsement. If his vote was simply in line with a minority of the committee the majority members owe it to themselves to say so in no uncertain terms at their meeting next week. Chairman Kimport owes it to himself to have the committee, of which he is the official head, speak openly and frankly and say whether he did right or wrong in giving his assistance to those who are trying to establish a new leadership for their party in the State. From one end of Pennsylvania to the other it has been announced that Centre County Democrats have turned down the old Guffey leadership, and taken their place with those in other counties opposing the Halls, the Dewalts, the Donnellys and the Ryans. In support of this Chairman Kimport's vote for Guthrie at Harrisburg is cited. It now rests with the County Committee to say whether Centre County Democrats were honestly represented or betrayed by Chairman Kimport. The issue is squarely before the County Committee. Its decision will be noted through the State. Failure to fearlessly meet the issue will properly be accepted as a confession that the Democrats of Centre County do not know where they are at and lack the courage to find out. In the event the County Committee refuses or neglects to act, self-respect leaves open but one course for Chairman Kimport or any other man with red blood in his veins.

William A. Tanyer Dead.

William A. Tanyer, Ferguson township's oldest citizen, died at the home of Milton Shuey on Sunday night, at 12.30 o'clock. Had he lived until Tuesday that day would have marked his 88th birthday anniversary. Mr. Tanyer had been ill about one year and several weeks ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis and this finally resulted in his death. Deceased was born in Centre County and in early life become a carpenter. When a young man he joined the Methodist Episcopal church and continued in that faith down to the time of his passing away. He was a most successful nimrod in his day, having had 40 deer and bear to his credit. His wife was Miss Mary Eckel, who died eleven years ago. Since that time he had divided his days among his children. In politics he was a Democrat of the Andrew Jackson type. He is survived by a brother, Captain Alexander Tanyer, of Kansas, also by the following children: Mrs. Harry Imboden, Mrs. George Graham and Alexander B. Tanyer, of State College; J. E. Tanyer and Mrs. N. G. Krebs, of Pine Grove Mills, and Mrs. Milton Shuey. They mourn the loss of a kind and devoted father. Burial was made today at 10 o'clock at the Pine Grove Mills cemetery.

Mrs. W. Scott Crain Dead.

Death on Friday evening, last, brought to a close the young but useful life of Mrs. W. Scott Crain at her late home at Port Matilda. Deceased had been suffering from kidney trouble for some time, but with beautiful fortitude she maintained a cheerful attitude and endeavored to prolong her days for the sake of a loving husband and three interesting little daughters. Her death is mourned by a large circle of friends to whom she had endeared herself by her many splendid qualities. A devoted wife and a kind and loving mother, Mrs. Crain contributed much toward making her home a delight to all who shared in its hospitality. Gifted with a sunny disposition she radiated joy and happiness wherever she went, but it was in the home that she was best contented. A devout Christian woman she made her life one of usefulness in her home community. By all who knew her the news of her death was received with manifestation of the deepest sorrow. In addition to her husband and children she is survived by an aged father. Funeral services were held on Monday, interment being made at Port Matilda.

Died in Ohio.

John T. Robb, a brother of George Robb, of Coleville, died on July 25, last, at his late home at Pratsville, Ohio. The deceased was born at Washington Furnace, Clinton County, and was one of five sons, all of whom served during the Civil war in defense of the Stars and Stripes. The "Democrat-Enquirer," published at McArthur, Vinton County, Ohio, gives the following notice of Mr. Robb's death:

"John T. Robb, aged 76 years and at one time superintendent of the Vincent County Infirmary, died at his home at Pratsville, July 25, 1911. He served as a soldier during the Civil war and was drawing a pension. In his younger days he was quite prominent in politics, being a Democrat in belief. He was a sociable and kindly man and leaves many friends to mourn his death. He had been in poor health for several months and clearly appreciated his condition, having remarked to Auditor McCarty, a week before his death, that he knew he was likely to die at any minute. Funeral services were held on the Thursday following his death and interment made in the cemetery nearby Pratsville."

Death at Spruce Creek.

A sad death was that on Tuesday morning, at 10.30 o'clock, of Harry Gates, tenant farmer on the John P. Lyon farm, Spruce Creek. Mr. Gates had been ill for some time, suffering from intestinal trouble, but had so far recovered as to be able to be up and about. He suffered a relapse and failed to rally. Deceased was aged about 40 years and is survived by a widow, who was Miss Margaret Everhart, and one son and an adopted daughter. Mr. Gates was a successful stock raiser, a good farmer and a kind neighbor and his place will be one that will be found hard to fill. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and was loyal to that faith. Burial was made today at 10 o'clock, Rev. R. M. Campbell officiating.

Death at Beech Creek.

John Hunter, a veteran of the Civil war and a well known resident of Beech Creek, died at that place at noon yesterday, the result of a complication of diseases. Deceased was aged 77 years and is survived by a widow and three sons and two daughters, as follows: Torrence and Charles, of Beech Creek; John of Chicago; Mrs. E. J. Morrison, of Jersey Shore, and Mrs. Roy Shook, of Williamsport. These brothers and sisters also survive: I. T., W. H., and S. H. Hunter and Mrs. A. E. Stover, Mrs. Maze Calderwood and Mrs. S. A. Palmer, all of Mill Hall, and Mrs. Jane Smith, of Lock Haven.

Mrs. W. H. Klepper Dead.

Mrs. Ida Verdella Klepper, wife of Sheriff W. H. Klepper, died at 8.35 o'clock on Wednesday evening, August 2, at her residence, East Church Street, from cancer, says the Lock Haven Express. She was born in Rebersburg, Centre county, on September 18, 1863, and spent her girlhood days in that village. Eight years ago she was stricken with the malady which caused her death, but she was always a patient sufferer. Everything that medical skill could do was tried to arrest the ravages of the disease and for some months she was in a Corry sanitarium under the treatment of a specialist. When she learned that nothing more could be done by the physicians and that her case was practically hopeless, she expressed a desire to come home, which she did in December last. Mrs. Klepper was a good, kind, loving mother, a devoted wife and one whose kind ministrations will be missed in the household. She was a life-long member of the Lutheran church and at the time of her death was affiliated with St. John's church, Lock Haven.

Deceased is survived by her husband, two sons, Leon and Paul, two daughters, Anna and Dorothy, and by her aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Kreamer, of Millheim.

Funeral services were conducted at her late home at 7.30 o'clock Friday evening by Rev. Jacob Diehl, pastor of St. John's church, after which the remains were taken to Millheim, where another service was held in the Lutheran church. Interment was made in Highland cemetery at Millheim.

Death at Hublersburg.

Henry Yocum, an old and well known Nittany valley farmer, died at his late home at Hublersburg on Saturday evening, last. He was aged 87 years, his death being due to diseases incident to advanced years. Mr. Yocum was a man of sound probity and was held in high respect by a host of friends. In early life he was employed in the woods, later taking up farming and meeting with considerable success. He never married and is survived by one sister, Mrs. Caroline Dunkle, of Lock Haven. Funeral services were held on Tuesday, interment being made at Hublersburg.

Died at Gatesburg.

Levi Garver, a well known resident of Gatesburg, died at his late home at that place on Sunday night, last, after a brief illness. Deceased was an active and consistent member of the church and by occupation was a lumberman. He is survived by several brothers and sisters, also a widow who before her marriage to Mr. Garver was Mrs. Strayer. Mr. Garver was a good citizen and a kind neighbor and his death is sincerely mourned by many friends. Burial was made on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, Rev. J. S. Shultz officiating.

Miss Katherine Witmer Dead.

Miss Katherine Witmer, a sister of William Witmer, died on Saturday, last, after an extended illness. Deceased was aged 85 years. Funeral services were held on Tuesday morning, conducted by Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, pastor of the Reformed church, of which the deceased was a member.

Death at Philipsburg.

Mrs. Mary Dutton, wife of Howard Dutton, of Philipsburg, died on Saturday at the Riverside sanitarium, at Jersey Shore. She was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Corson, at Jersey Shore, when she was taken ill about one week prior to her death. Deceased was aged 25 years.

George Sager Dead.

After an illness extending over a period of a year and a half, George Sager died at his late home in Bellefonte on Sunday evening, at 6.30 o'clock. Deceased was aged about 65 years. Funeral services were held from the late residence on Tuesday.

Seth T. Foresman Dead.

Seth T. Foresman, at one time mayor of Williamsport and well known in Bellefonte and throughout Centre County, died at Williamsport on Saturday, last, aged 73 years. He was mayor of Williamsport from 1905 to 1908.

Tioga County Doctor Arrested.

Dr. J. E. Hayes, of Liberty, was placed in the Williamsport jail on Tuesday charged with the killing of Raymond English. According to witnesses, the doctor struck English a blow in the abdomen and then left. The young man was taken violently ill and died several days afterwards. Dr. Hayes, after a consultation with his attorney, Walter E. Ritter, did not deny striking the blow, but said that it was delivered in a spirit of fun. The charge is involuntary manslaughter.

The Brazil Nut Tree.

In the district watered by the river Amazon are many varieties of trees, the most important being the Brazil nut tree, sometimes 100 to 130 feet in height, with horizontal branches, the ends of which hang like great ropes. The smooth cylindrical trunk has a circumference of twelve to seventeen feet at a height of fifty feet from the ground. The evergreen elongated leaves, made tough by nature to withstand the tropical heat of the region, give the tree an attractive appearance, enhanced in the flowering season by large bunches of yellow blossoms growing like ears of corn. After the flowering the fruit is formed in the shape of fairly large seed vessels, commonly called pods, which vary in size and contain from fifteen to twenty nuts, closely adhering, in similar manner to the sections of an orange. The pods incasing the nuts are about half an inch thick and so hard that the wheels of a heavy cart might pass over them without causing breakage. To remove the nuts the native Indians use a peculiarly shaped knife.

Her Fan.

It is the custom in Paris for the cook to do all the marketing. This adds considerably to the cook's income, for every dealer allows her 5 centimes (1 cent) on every franc (or 20 cents) she spends. So French cooks insist on their marketing prerogative, and the mistress who denies them it is deemed a very mean, small, niggardly sort of person. Well, a person of this sort, an elderly woman, was in the habit of doing her own marketing in a long duster. The duster hid her purchases. It prevented her, while usurping her cook's rights, from being detected in the act. As the woman one hot morning was walking homeward in her duster from the Marche St. Honore she stumbled in the Rue Hyacinthe, and a leg of mutton fell and rolled across the sidewalk. A passing stranger picked up the leg of mutton and returned it, with a bow and smile, "Permit me, madame—your fan," he said.

Naming the Gerrymander.

The gerrymander was christened in 1813, although it must have been in operation long before that. A stanch old Federalist, Governor Eldridge Gerry, controlled through his legislature the redistricting of Massachusetts under the census of 1810. In the office of Benjamin Russell, an ardent Republican editor, hung a map of the state as newly subdivided by Gerry and his men. Gilbert Stuart's ready pencil whimsically added to the outlines of a grotesque district the wings and tail of a dragon.

"Ha!" he said when he had finished. "How's that for a salamander?"

The Republican Russell growled. "Better call it a gerrymander." And American politicians have taken his advice.—Independent.

Heroism.

Heroism, in which I include courage, fortitude and self denial, is an essential element of a great character; courage, which leads a man forth to meet danger whenever thereto called by duty; fortitude, the power and practice of endurance, which renders him superior to pain and makes him accept with cheerfulness whatever fate comes, and self denial, the subordination of the material to the spiritual, of the lower to the higher nature of man, which renders his will master of his appetite and passions and causes him to forego every personal benefit for the sake of honor and conscience.—David Dudley Field.

"Live Bait" For Alligators.

The negroes of Jamaica, in the British West Indies, use "live bait" to catch alligators. They tie a puppy to a tree near the alligator's haunt and await developments with a gun. The puppy's yelp is exactly like the bark of the baby alligator. Naturally Mrs. Alligator comes out of her mudhole in the lagoon, thinking somebody is troubling her offspring. Then the negro gets to work with his gun, and Mrs. Alligator falls a victim to her maternal affection.

An Outrage.

When Major General Sir John McNeill, V. C., was badly wounded at Essaman in the Ashanti war he emerged from the bush exclaiming in angry and indignant tones, as if some one had deeply insulted him, "An infernal scoundrel out there has shot me through the arm!"

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Miss Ruth Borest has been ill for the last week or so but is somewhat improved at this writing.

Frank Weiland, wife and family of Linden Hall, passed through town bright and early Sunday morning, west-bound.

Quite a number of our townsfolk will take advantage of the cheap excursion to Gettysburg on Sunday, next, and view the historic battle field.

Harry Bigler and wife, of Pleasant Gap, and Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams were entertained at the J. B. Whitmer home over Sunday.

Word was received here on Tuesday of the illness of Mrs. J. B. Krebs, of Northumberland. She is ill from pneumonia and her recovery is regarded as doubtful.

Mrs. S. E. Moore and sister, Miss Nannie Martz, last week were called to Pitcairn by the illness of their brother, Jacob Martz, who has been quite low but is somewhat improved.

During the electric storm last Wednesday J. J. Tressler's house was struck by lightning. On the same day J. C. Miller's house, on Main Street, was also struck, tearing off a door and deafening Mrs. Miller.

Mrs. Jacob Renschler and two interesting children came up from Staten Island last week for their annual outing at Grandpa A. J. Lytle's home. Since her arrival here Mrs. Renschler has not been very well.

Rev. R. M. Illingsworth bid adeau to his flock on Thursday morning, when he departed preparatory to sailing for Newfoundland, where he expects to spend a month fishing for salmon. He will do his fishing about three hundred miles from St. John's and a big catch may be looked for.

Word has been received of the sudden death of Clark Logan in the West, who was crushed between two logs while working on the lakes. He was a brother of Mrs. O. P. Bloom, of this place, and was a splendid young fellow. He is survived by one brother and several sisters, also his parents.

The elopers returned home Sunday and received the usual family blessing. We have not yet heard when or where the nuptial knot was tied, but report says it was at Atlantic City. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Johnson and is a splendid girl. The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Smyth, and is amply able to provide a comfortable home for his new wife. They expect to go to housekeeping soon at State College, where the groom is employed.

Lawrence L. Brown, formerly superintendent of the brick plant here, is a pleasant and welcome visitor in town.

Grandmother Blowers, who has been spending some time at the home of her son, Harry, returned on Saturday to the home of another son, at Houtzdale.

David Kohn, a merchant here, has a suit on hand, the result of information being made against him on the charge of selling cigaretts to a child. A hearing before Squire Merryman was scheduled for Monday evening, but Mr. Kohn waived the hearing and the case now goes to court. Selling cigaretts to children and liquor to minors should be stopped, and that instantly.

Have the burglars been to your house? This is the first question these days when neighbors happen to meet. There have been quite a few attempts to break into homes here of late, but so far as the writer has been able to learn an entrance was effected in one case, only, and that gave the prowlers a very slim reward. Nevertheless, the attempted thieving has caused considerable excitement. Wives whose husbands work at night are afraid to remain home alone, fearing further annoyance and trouble. Several persons are watching to catch the prowlers, and once caught it will go hard with them.

Special Sale.

Port Matilda.

S. S. Osman made a business trip to Tyrone on Tuesday.

One of our ministers is traveling pretty fast these days—in an automobile.

While seated on a swing Christ Cowher fell on Sunday evening and fractured his left arm above the wrist.

The farmers are wearing a smile since it rained. They say they will have lots of corn, even if they have no potatoes.

Port Matilda was alive with candidates a day or two ago. All were wearing their best smiles and looking for votes. They are boomers and some are throwing the harpoon into the other fellows' camp.

Sam thinks of applying for a school, or is it that he is working in the interests of another? He says that if he should land a school he would resign in favor of a certain popular young teacher. All right, Sam.

There was recently a lively time over in California hollow when some cider and men got mixed up together. In the wind-up one of them almost lost his life. It is time the authorities are doing something to break up the "doings" over in that section.

On Saturday, August 5, Albert O. Eves and Miss Nannie Stiver were married at the U. B. church parsonage at Port Matilda by Rev. H. A. McKelvey. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stiver, of Stormstown, and is a splendid young lady. The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. David Eves, of near Warriorsmark. The young couple are highly respected by a large number of friends, all of whom wish them much happiness in their married life. They will go to housekeeping on a farm in the near future.

Unionville.

Mrs. Ella Erhard, of Ordara, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charles Eckenroth.

The widow of the late Bush Calhoun was buried from this place on Saturday afternoon, last.

Misses Mary and Margaret Orner, of Altoona, spent Sunday with their aunt, Mrs. Thomas Eckenroth.

Mrs. H. D. Lindemuth became seriously ill from stomach trouble on Monday, and at this writing she is no better.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Williams departed on Wednesday for Philadelphia and Atlantic City, where they expect to enjoy a ten days' visit.

Miss Margaret Cambridge died at her late home at this place on Saturday afternoon, last, at 1 o'clock. She had been ill for some time. Funeral services were held at Bellefonte on Tuesday morning, interment being made in the Catholic cemetery at that place.

The I. O. O. F. picnic held on Saturday was quite a success. Owing to the threatening weather many did not go to the grounds until in the evening. By that time a large crowd was in attendance and many elaborate suppers were spread under the towering pines. Good fellowship prevailed and all present had a most enjoyable time.

Repair Lamb Street Bridge.

The bridge over Spring Creek, at the foot of Lamb Street, is to be repaired, Council on Monday night directing the Street Committee to proceed at once with the necessary repairs. It will be necessary to re-plank the bridge and replace certain parts of the iron superstructure which have become so badly rusted as to become useless and unsafe. Plans will be prepared for a new bridge over the Buffalo Run, near the Pennsylvania Railroad round-house. As soon as funds are available Council will order a concrete bridge built over the tail race at the Yeager swing factory. The latter bridge will cost, it was estimated, upward of $1,000.

Keichline Jabs at Fortney.

during his administration with his legal mind and ability in trying cases. The practice made him one of the best criminal lawyers at the bar."

Just as if all the foregoing were not enough, Squire Keichline throws out this sly insinuation that other Democratic aspirants are going to spend money illegally during the campaign. He is not, so he promises in this language:

"I do not intend to spend any money for this nomination or election outside of legitimate expenses."

Squire Keichline's rivals for the Democratic nomination for District Attorney are Kennedy Johnston, Paul Fortney and Kline Woodring. If he means by his letter that any one or all of the three rivals are spending or expect to spend money for anything other than legitimate campaign expenses he owes it to the public to specifically say so. The public wants to know.

Crop Reports Irregular.

Bradstreet's Report says: Crop reports show spotted conditions in different crops, rendering generalization difficult. Recent rains have benefited late corn, but the early planted crop does not look so well. Short crop estimates are more in evidence. In Iowa 30 per cent. damage is reported. Late corn has been helped in eastern Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska, and the crop east of the Mississippi in the surplus states is in better shape. Nebraska reports say a full corn crop cannot now be expected in view of early drought. In the east corn is irregular, and sweet corn is high in price and low in quality.

Rains have helped pastures and late potatoes in the west.

Spring-wheat crop reports are also irregular. Moist weather is credited with spreading rust damage in some places, but reports from other sections show improvement. Harvesting is delayed by the moist conditions. Bradstreet's correspondent at Winnipeg wires that rust reports are unfounded, that the crop is all headed out, and that a large yield is probable. In many parts of North Dakota and southwestern Minnesota reports are rather poor.

Grain yields in eastern Washington, Idaho and Montana are good, but the Washington apple crop is reported a short one.

Oats harvesting is about finished. Yields in the central regions are showing up better than earlier indicated, but the crop is undoubtedly very short, as are potatoes and hay. Western estimates of hay and potatoes are 45,000,000 tons and 270,000,000 bushels, shortages from last year of 25 and 20 per cent., respectively.

With the exception of a few reports of too much rain for cotton, mainly from parts of Mississippi and Alabama, cotton crop reports are quite favorable, though the unanimity as to good reports is not so marked as in recent weeks. Oklahoma, Texas and the southwest generally promises a record yield. In parts of southwest Texas dry weather still continues, but the rest of the state sends favorable reports. Boll weevil and too much rain is reported in parts of Mississippi. Yields promise large in the lower Mississippi. Corn, rice and sugar cane are all doing well in Louisiana. A very severe drought is reported in parts of Virginia and North Carolina, and Richmond reports the potato crop a failure, apples scarce and high, and many towns are facing water famines. In the vicinity of Norfolk, however, conditions are better. Rather too much rain reported in Oklahoma.

Big Sale at Claster's.

One of the biggest bargain sales ever held in Bellefonte is scheduled to begin today at Claster's Underselling Store and continue for ten days. During the last two days the store has been closed to give the clerks an opportunity to unpack and mark a thousand and one articles comprising the stock of D. L. Perr, a merchant who went into bankruptcy at Pitcairn and whose entire outfit was purchased at a low figure by Mr. Claster. Some idea of the slashing in prices may be had when it is stated that overalls will be sold at 10 cents, negligee shirts at 27 cents and canvass gloves at 2 cents. Everything scheduled for the sale has been marked at greatly reduced prices.

Business Men's Picnic.

The Passenger Department of the Central R. R. of Pa. at Bellefonte, Pa. will until August 15th, receive bids for the various stand privileges at Hecla Park, account of the Centre—Clinton County Business Men's Picnic Tuesday, August 22nd. 1911. These will include Restaurant, Ice Cream, Novelties of all kinds, and any other proper privileges for such an occasion. 8-5-2t

Pomona Grange Meeting.

Centre County Pomona Grange will meet in the hall of Bald Eagle Grange, at Milesburg, Thursday, August 17, at 10 o'clock, a. m. All fourth degree members are cordially invited. The fifth degree will be conferred at the afternoon session. Reports of the picnic committee and telephone committee will be made at this meeting.

My Invisible Client

I Began to Serve Her by an Illegal Proceeding

By R. Forsythe Emery

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I am an attorney. One summer evening—I was twenty-seven years old at the time—while it was still daylight I was sauntering on a thoroughfare lined with dwellings. Passing under a window situated but a few feet above my head I heard a woman's voice pronounce my name in a tone almost inaudible. I stopped and looked up. From between the slats came the words:

"I want a lawyer."

All being dark within, I could see nothing.

"How do you know that I am a lawyer?" I asked. "How can I serve you?"

There was no reply. I listened, but could hear nothing more. There was but one interpretation. Some one must have entered the room whose presence put an end to the conversation. I waited a few moments; then, thinking that my lurking there under the window might compromise my invisible client, I walked on.

The next evening and the next for several days I strolled by the house at the same hour and even loitered a few moments under the window, but not a whisper came from behind the blinds.

I formed many theories as to what had occurred. It was evident that some one—the voice seemed to belong to a young woman—was detained unwillingly. But why? To this there were many possible answers. There was one that caused me to doubt the expediency of pursuing the matter any further. The person might be feeble minded—perhaps insane. If this were true I would make a mistake, doing great injury to my client as well as myself, by an interference.

I am a methodical man and determined to begin methodically at the beginning. I must learn from the outside who occupied the house, then something about the occupants. I hired a boy to watch the premises at that hour in the morning when tradesmen deliver provisions, note the names on the wagons calling and make a list of them. In this way I easily secured several firm names, one of a grocer of whom I bought my own supplies, and he gave me the name of the person to whom he sent goods at the premises in question. It was Miss Elizabeth Markley, a rich lady about fifty years old.

My next move was to obtain permission of the grocer to go on his wagon and deliver goods myself. Putting on old clothes, I did so, took a basket of provisions into the kitchen and by chatting with the cook learned that the occupants were Miss Markley and her niece, Miss Irene Benham, a girl between seventeen and eighteen. This was all the information I could secure, but it was enough for a beginning. If Miss Markley was rich I might be able to find something through records of her property—that is, if it were real estate. I went to the offices of the receiver of taxes, but the name Elizabeth Markley was not on his list. It occurred to me to look for the name of Benham, and I found "the estate of Adoniram Benham, deceased." Here was a pointer. If Irene Benham was heir to this property it was possible that her aunt was holding her a prisoner while she was attempting to get her estate into her own hands. At the court of chancery I was shown the will of Adoniram Benham, and the case was plain. Irene Benham was heir to property worth about half a million.

If Miss Markley were wicked enough to fulfill the theory I had formed of her it would be necessary to fight her with fire. I dare not make any open move whatever lest she should remove her niece to some hiding place where she could not be found. I must get into clandestine communication with Miss Benham.

I bought a book suitable for a present to a young lady, prettily illustrated, and sent it to her through the mail. I sent no note of explanation with it nor wrote anything on the flyleaf, but the book itself contained a communication. By a delicate underscoring of words I informed her who I was, my address, how she could reach me, what I had learned about her and my suspicion. I was doubtful of the success of this maneuver, for if her aunt were watching her she would examine the book closely before allowing her niece to have it. For this reason I did not begin my message before the fifteenth page and made my interlineations so faint that no one except one reading the book would notice them.

I waited a week for a result to my expedient. When it came I was sure no ordinary message could leave the Markley home without being carefully inspected. The reply was an advertising card of a secondhand bookstore. I should not have thought of its being a reply to my message had not the name of the firm been underscored in pencil. I went to the bookstore and asked if they had any communication for me. They said they had not. I went away disappointed, and while walking along thinking of a possible explanation of the problem it occurred to me that the book I had sent Miss Markley might have been sold to the firm in question. Returning to the store, I asked for the book and was delighted to be offered the very copy I had sent. I bought it and as I walked away looked for a cipher message in it. I was not long in finding dots under certain words and without difficulty read the message.

My theory was correct. The girl's aunt, her father's sister, was holding her a prisoner. The writer did not know why. All she knew was that her aunt was watching her always. She was never permitted to go out alone and felt assured that any letter she received or sent was opened before reaching or leaving her. She might possibly run away, but she knew not where to go. Suspecting that this surveillance had something to do with property she had inherited from her father, she had desired to get into communication with an attorney in order to learn something about that property and the terms of the will.

All was now pretty clear to me. By the terms of the instrument Miss Markley was to be her niece's guardian till she was eighteen years of age, when the girl was to be free to act for herself and to receive her property. But if the heiress at the time should be incapacitated by illness, be feeble minded or in any way unfitted to care for her estate, she should remain under her aunt's guardianship and the property pass to Miss Markley for life, after which other disposition should be made of it. The heiress would come of age in a few weeks.

It was evident to me that Miss Markley's object was to keep her ward in the background till after she was eighteen, and she was doubtless hatching a plan to prove her feeble minded.

It was my part to concoct a plan to outwit this scheme. My weakness lay in the fact that at the slightest demonstration on my part Miss Benham would likely be spirited away, that till she came of age her aunt was her legal guardian and that I had nothing to show that I had been retained as the young lady's counsel. Besides this, I had never seen her and had no evidence that she was of sound mind. Should I apply to the courts my interference would at once become public property, and no judge would order Miss Benham brought before him on such scant evidence as I might furnish. I could do nothing that was legal; therefore I must break the law, at the same time getting such advantage as would protect both me and my client.

Realizing the fact that "possession is nine points in the law," I resolved to transfer the keeping of Miss Benham to some other person than her aunt. This must either be done by kidnaping her or giving her an opportunity to come of her own accord under the care of a new keeper.

Having opened communication with her surreptitiously, it was to be expected that she would look for a meaning in anything I would send her. I dare not bribe any of the servants in the employ of her aunt, for it was to be supposed that she controlled them. I concluded to use a method of the same kind as the first I had tried. I sent her a magazine marked "Sample Copy." Under certain words that embodied my message I pricked pin holes. I felt more confidence in her noticing this device than the first, though it was not as plain. I told her what was necessary for her to do and why, advising her to send me word when it would be possible for her to leave her aunt that I might meet her and take her to a place where she would be out of her aunt's reach and secure the benefit of the law. I also suggested a method of reply. On a certain day and hour she was to drop from a window one or more papers with figures denoting, first, the day of the month; second, the hour (one to twenty-four) that she expected to be able to leave the house. The letter "F" was to stand for front and "R" for rear. The letters "A," "B" and "C" would denote the story from which she would leave or must be taken.

It was between light and dark of the day appointed for her to drop the paper that I strolled by the house. She must have been watching for me, for I saw something white flutter from an upper window. I kept my eyes fixed on it and when it reached the sidewalk picked it up. On it was "8. 23-24. R. B," which I knew meant the eighth day of the month between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, from a second story rear room. This, of course, threw upon me the responsibility of providing a means of descent from an upper story, besides a method of flight. Had the paper fallen into the hands of a watcher there would have been nothing intelligible in it.

I made an examination of the rear of the house and found that there was an alley there. The yard was inclosed in a high fence, the door of which was kept locked. I provided a ladder long enough to reach the second story and a circular saw in order to burglarize the door.

On the appointed night, repairing to the alley, I cut a hole in the door and removed the lock. Then I watched till about half past 11 o'clock, when there was the flash at a certain window on the second story, probably of an electric hand light. Understanding this to be a signal, I raised the ladder. The window was noiselessly opened, and a figure descended. I removed the ladder and led the way to a carriage waiting on the nearest street. At the door I saw by a street lamp for the first time the features of my client. I was well satisfied with the sight.

I put her in a carriage and told the driver to take her to the house of an elderly lady with whom I had arranged for her reception.

I secured Miss Benham's fortune to her, and when she paid my bill she threw in her own sweet self.

Genesis of the Playhouse.

Thespis in 536 B. C. acted his plays in a wagon. In 499 B. C., during the time of Aeschylus, creator of drama, the performances took place upon temporary wooden scaffolds, one of which, having collapsed during a representation, the Athenians were induced to build the great theater of Dionysius, calling it the Lenaion, which was the first permanent stone structure of its kind. It required 160 years to erect it. There was no scenery, but he scene was decorated so as to represent the locality in which the action was going on. Roofless was his structure, but around the building were porticoes, to which the people retreated during rainstorms. Sometimes awnings were used to ward off the sun's heat. Invariably the actors were males, who wore masks with mouthpieces, answering the purpose of speaking trumpets. Owing to the vastness of the theater metal vases were placed under the seats to serve as reflectors of sound. Performances began in the morning and usually lasted twelve hours.—New York Telegram.

Hanged and Buried and Lived.

It is not given to many men to be hanged and buried and yet be able to tell the tale, but such was the experience of one John Bartendale, who was executed at York in 1634 for felony. After his body had hung for nearly an hour it was buried. A gentleman passing by the grave, which had not been filled up, thought he saw the earth move, and with the help of his servant he disinterred the convict, who was still alive. It was the custom in those days to bury suicides and executed criminals without any coffin. The man was carefully treated and entirely recovered. He became hostler at the coaching house in York and lived a most exemplary life. When asked what he could tell in relation to hanging, as having experienced it, he replied, "When I was turned off flashes of fire seemed to dart from my eyes, from which I fell into a state of darkness and insensibility."

Plon-Plon and Bernhardt.

Prince Napoleon, commonly known as Plon-Plon, often used to come to George Sand's rehearsals. He was extremely fond of her. The first time I ever saw that man I turned pale and felt as though my heart stopped beating. He looked so much like Napoleon I. that I disliked him for it. By resembling him it seemed to me that he made him seem less far away and brought him nearer to every one.

Mme. Sand introduced him to me in spite of my wishes. He looked at me in an impertinent way. He displeased me. I scarcely replied to his compliments and went closer to George Sand.

"Why, she is in love with you!" he exclaimed, laughing. George Sand stroked my cheek gently. "She is my little madonna," she answered; "do not torment her."—Sarah Bernhardt's Memoirs.

Convincing Argument.

A certain colonel's gardener was going through the woods belonging to his employer when he saw a man gathering nuts.

As the colonel had given strict orders that this was not to be permitted, the gardener accosted the man. "You'll have to clear out of this," he said. "I've had orders to keep all these nuts for the colonel this year."

"That's all right," replied the man. "I'm getting 'em for the colonel."

A week later the gardener came across the man again.

"Look here," he said angrily. "You weren't getting those nuts for the colonel at all."

"I tell you I was," was the emphatic reply. "Do you think I was getting 'em for the shells?"—London Ideas.

The Plumb Line In Porto Rico.

There are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance in point was found in the island of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that in mapping the island the northern and southern coast lines, as shown in the older maps, had each to be moved inward half a mile.—Scientific American.

Worse Off.

"You know that I told you how I dropped our rubber plant and wrecked it?"

"Yes."

"I'm sorry I did it."

"Why?"

"My wife has just bought a new one that's twice as heavy."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hardly.

"The old, old story!" exclaimed the husband, with a long drawn sigh, as he laid down his paper. "Another man committed suicide because his home was unhappy."

"And did that make his home any happier," asked his wife, "or doesn't the paper say?"

Long Engagements.

Young Man—Do you believe in long engagements, sir? Cynical Benedick—Certainly, my young friend, certainly! The longer the engagement the shorter the marriage!

No nation can be destroyed while it possesses a good home life.—J. G. Holland.

Word to the Bride.

A recent bride who goes in for originality conceived the idea of changing the regulation wedding canopy for bride and groom from a bell to one of her own invention. She took a gracefully shaped white parsol and covered it completely with white roses and their leaves. A fringe of the roses and vine depended from the edge of the parasol, while from each stay hung a small white floral bell. The handle was twined with white tulle and rose vines, the tulle tied into a fluffy bow holding a cluster of the fragrant joy bells.

The mother of another bride wanted to send her away on her wedding journey to the accompaniment of plenty of good luck omens, but feared the use of rice, slippers and the like, the throwing of which so often proves disastrous. To forestall this dangerous fun, she placed garlanded baskets of rose petals and confetti on the window sills just previous to the departure of the bride and groom, and invited the guests to help themselves. The bridal pair departed in a storm of flying colors and fragrance that could not but presage the happiness expressed in the gay shower.

Among the prettiest of the recent home weddings was a sweet pea affair, in which the pinks and lavenders of these pretty garden flowers were charmingly evident on all sides.

The bride wore white and carried a shower of bride's roses, while her maid of honor, also gowned in white, carried a semi-shower of pink and lavender sweet peas. There were two bridesmaids, one wearing pink and carrying a basket swung on a lavender ribbon and filled with lavender sweet peas; the other in lavender with a pink ribbon swung basket, holding pink sweet peas. The delicate color combinations formed a fantasy of spring quite beyond the power of mere words to describe.

The bride's table was centered with white sweet peas in a miniature hedge of pink and lavender sweet peas. All about the rooms vases, rustic baskets and receptacles of all sizes and shapes held masses of the pea in all their varying shades while the rooms were filled with their refreshing odor. Considering the small expense involved in carrying out the sweet peas wedding, now that these blossoms are in season, the suggestion is worthy of adoption by the August bride.

Clever Paris Beggars.

Begging is forbidden on the Paris boulevards. But one day recently a pale, poorly dressed man was seen humbly approaching various pedestrians. He was evidently not used to begging, and as he told his pathetic story without the requisite boldness people passed him by unnoticed. A man dressed in black stepped up to him and showed him a card. He carried a thick stick and wore a heavy mustache and thick boots, which are the outward and visible signs, with a multicolored ribbon in the buttonhole, of a detective in plain clothes.

"Now, then, get out of this or I'll run you in," he said roughly. Then in a lower tone, "Poor chap!" and furtively he gave the man some silver.

People had seen him do it, and, cheering the kind hearted policeman, they, too, gave to the poor beggar. A few minutes afterward in a side street the two men divided the spoils and moved off separately to ply their trade elsewhere. The detective wasn't a detective at all, but a beggar made up for the part.

Finally Lost It.

"I may have lost my golf ball," thought the old man as he crept on all fours round the bush into which it had rolled, "but I will not lose my temper."

So he continued to grovel and grope and to wear a persuasive, patient smile. His knees bagged, his back ached horribly, and the bush bestowed upon his hands a generous quantity of thorns. But he refused to discard his smile and kept on repeating:

"No; I will not lose my temper. I will not."

Suddenly the elusive ball caught his eye. Flopping flat, he stretched his hands toward it, grasped it among its nest of thorns and gingerly withdrew it.

"Holty-toity!" exclaimed an old woman behind him. "You ought to be ashamed, bird nesting at your time of life!"

And then he did lose his temper.—London Answers.

Two Breakfasts In Berlin.

There is not much to be got by the Berlin citizen in the way of breakfast—simply a cup of coffee and a roll or two—but along about 11 o'clock everybody starts for the cafe for a "second breakfast," generally a meat or a cheese sandwich. He makes up for his light regimen at the 1 o'clock Mittagstisch of soup, meat, vegetables, preserved fruits, pudding and wine or beer at discretion. Then he does not hasten back to business, but plays or jokes with his children fifteen or twenty minutes, rests or sleeps for thirty more, has a chat, a cup of coffee and a cigar and returns to business at 3 o'clock again, perhaps to work until 8 or 9 in the evening. Then he comes home again to a supper of cold meats, salads, cheese and beer, which will probably be followed by more beer as friends drop in to smoke the black German cigars and play "skat" or "sixty-six."—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

Health Hints.

When the hair begins falling out by reason of dandruff, try shampooing without soap. A shampoo for this purpose is made of the beaten yolks of two eggs in limewater. Massage this well into the scalp, wash out with warm water and finish with a rinse of cold water, to avoid taking cold.

Make a lotion of one and one-half drams of pure glycerin, with two ounces of limewater. Every fortnight make a thorough application of this lotion to the scalp by separating the hair in strands and putting the liquid on with a small soft brush. After the treatment the scalp must be carefully massaged with the fingertips, stimulating circulation and bringing nourishment to the dry cuticle.

After two applications add to the lotion an ounce of tincture of cantharides. Apply every night for two weeks. The treatment may be gradually left off as the dandruff diminishes.

When the hair is excessively oily limewater applied with a small sponge will improve the condition. Only a small amount should be used, enough to moisten the scalp without making it damp.

The business of curing dandruff is often a slow one, but patience brings about its just reward in a glossy, silken new growth of hair and an incalculable improvement to such as does not yield to the inroads to scalp sickness. Under no conditions should dandruff be neglected, as sooner or later it will cause an uncomfortable itching, and a most unattractive head of hair.

Plenty of fresh air and sunshine are excellent tonics to be used in conjunction with the given lotion.

The toe nails should always be trimmed squarely across. If rounded they are apt to grow in at the corners. The cuticle around the nails should be kept loose and smooth, the same as the finger nails. For ingrowing nails cut a little notch in the middle of the nail and force a tiny piece of absorbent cotton under the corner of the nail.

When sleep seems slow in coming these hot nights try placing a bucket of cold water near your bed. Or dip a sheet in cold water, wring it so dry it will not drip and hang near your bed where the breeze will blow upon it. Either plan will cool your room considerably. If you find it necessary to sleep during the day because of night employment a dish of sweetened water placed near your bed will keep the pestiferous fly from bothering you.

Good Things to Eat.

Tomatoes lend themselves to such a variety of forms in cookery as to be a source of constant delight to any one particularly fond of them. Quite a number of dainty and nourishing luncheon dishes have them for a foundation. One menue of this sort consisted of pineapple cocktail, panned tomatoes, potato crisps and red raspberry shortcake.

Pineapple Cocktail—Shred the flesh of a ripe pineapple, chill thoroughly, having first dusted with confectioner's sugar. Serve in cocktail glasses after pouring over each portion a tablespoonful of maraschino and garnishing with a maraschino cherry.

Panned Tomatoes—Cut good sized solid tomatoes in halves. Place skin side downward in a buttered baking dish. Put a lump of butter on each half, season with salt and pepper and bake until soft but not brown. Make a creamy gravy of milk, butter, flour and seasoning, pour over the tomatoes, put back in the oven for a few minutes. Have ready slices of toast and place two halves on each slice and pour over the gravy.

Potato Crisp—Cut old boiled potatoes of uniform size crosswise in slices half an inch thick. Drop them in a deep pan of hot fat or brown carefully on each side in a well greased frying pan. Sprinkle with fine minced parsley and salt to taste as soon as they are removed from the pan.

Red Raspberry Shortcake—Make the cake of a rich biscuit dough, split and arrange as for strawberry shortcake. Place the berries in a bowl, crush slightly, add a little lemon juice to give a slightly tart taste, and serve with cream and sugar, or, if hot with hard sauce.

Thanksgiving Day, 1911. When is it?

The question "When is Thanksgiving Day?" was started going the rounds recently and November 23 and November 30 stood nip and tuck with the odds on neither.

Usually Thanksgiving Day comes on the fourth Thursday, according to the almanacs, but this year there are five Thursdays in November. None of the almanacs that were referred to said that the holiday falls on the last Thursday, and this is what caused the discussion to go on without end.

The calendars show November 30 printed in red ink and it is a safe guess that the calendar makers were pretty sure of their ground, but even calendar makers are not infallible. Once, before the war, Thanksgiving came in the middle of the month, so the oldest inhabitants are not certain whether the fourth or the fifth Thursday this year will be the day.

Thoughts in Fashions.

Lace bags over colored silk linings are carried with evening gowns.

Forget-me-nots are used to form complete crowns on lingerie hats.

Sailor collars of satin or silk are now veiled with black or white chiffon.

Plain ribbons have a following, but figured ones are undoubtedly in the lead.

On separate coats the sailor collar is very noticeable. It must be very deep.

The medium and high waistline will unquestionably be continued over the summer.

Much favor is being shown checked ribbons, and the latest have alternate checks of satin.

Lingerie frills on the cuffs of sheer linen blouses falling over the hands are worn with street suits.

Delicate combinations of turquoise or shells pink with lavender are more exquisitely blended than ever before.

The controlling feature in waist fashions is the continued use of the matching or so-called "costume" bodice.

In costumes and separate blouses the sleeves are almost without exception short-elbow and three-quarters length.

White serge suits often show a touch of bright color.

Embroidery is the dominant note in summer dress decoration.

Suede shoes with tiny straps over the insteps are very popular.

Paris prophesies that the fall will see wide gowns—very wide.

Small hats with the sugar loaf as the leader—are expected this fall.

Bail frings is a stylish trimming, edging sleeve, skirts and tunics.

Tulle or mousseline is used to head tops of bodices. It is laid in folds.

The stockings and upper part of the boots should match the skirt in color.

Little coats of net are used to finish afternoon costumes. They hang over veils of tulle and give a "suit" effect without any uncomfortable warmth.

Eyelet embroidery in all possible phases is used on the midsummer hats. Bows. brims, facings, entire shapes are made of white and colored eyelet work.

A new coiffure resembles a Louis XVI. style. It is of rows or puffs, very soft indeed, placed over the sides and front of the head, running from front to back.

Lace topped hatpins to wear with lingerie millinery are pretty and very easily made at home.

Very broad ribbon is used to form tabliers or loose panels at the front and back of dresses.

New mesh veils are of two colors. A black web over a flesh tint producing a becoming complexion effect.

Wash muslin frocks, with colored figures on white ground are quite the fashion for the every day hours.

Crochet and passementerie button are two of the "ornament" styles that conform with Parisian fashion dictates.

Butterfly bows of lace are used in hats on sashes of velvet, on girdles of satin and on slashed tunics at the side.

Etiquette.

Bridesmaids and maids of honor follow unhesitatingly the wishes of the bride regarding the color and style of their gowns, as well as all the accessories.

When the bride is blessed with wealth she often presents the gowns and accessories in all their completeness to her maids as a gift.

The bridegroom sends the flowers to be carried by the maids, and the bride adds a pretty little trinket, which often takes the form of a piece of jewelry.

The maid of honor receives the bride's bouquet and gloves while the ring is being placed on her finger, returning them at the close of the ceremony.

Maid of honor and best man follow immediately after the bride and bridegroom in leaving the church.

Only intimate friends and relatives of a bride are privileged to present their gifts to her in person.

When the luncheon guests are ladies exclusively, the hostess leads the way to the dining room, where places are chosen at will or are fixed by dainty plate favors with the names inscribed on one side.

Many hostesses prepare for an informal musical and literary programme following luncheon.

Black borders of equal width on stationery and cards are used by the widow as long as she wears mourning.

Postal cards are only proper for announcing meetings or the most impersonal messages.

The hostess driving with another woman in a closed carriage allows her guest to take the choice of seats by giving her precedence in entering the carriage.

Only the most delicate scent is allowed on a lady's stationery, and it is better to dispense with perfumery in this line altogether. If used, a sachet is introduced into the box in which the stationery is kept, the scent being the same as that affected by the owner.

There's nothing so good for a sore throat as Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. Cures it in a few hours. Relieves any pain in any part.

Important Postoffice Suggestions.

Remember always:

To write a plain hand, without embellishment.

To put the stamp in the upper right hand corner.

To register your valuable letters and parcels.

To have your mail addressed to your street number and provide mail boxes at places of delivery.

To notify your postmaster when you change your address, giving both the old and the new address, especially when temporarily absent.

To place your name and address on the upper left hand corner of your letter or parcel, and if you desire special return so state. Mail must be returned to sender in strict accordance with return request.

That the postmaster is forbidden to furnish addresses of patrons.

The postage stamps are sold in rolls and book form.

To send your money by postoffice money order or registered letter.

That ten cents extra postage insures the delivery of your mail upon its arrival at destination.

That objectional post cards are withdrawn from the mails.

That the "Parcels Post" rate to foreign countries is only twelve cents per pound.

That "Reply Coupons" are on sale at the stamp window, good for return postage from foreign countries.

That the clerks should get a hustle on.

To seal tightly envelopes enclosing post cards bearing particles of glass, metal, mica, etc., and put on letter postage, two cents per ounce.

Money orders are drawn on every country on the globe, are payable one year from the last day of the month of issue. Duplicates of lost or destroyed orders are issued without charge.

Aids to Beauty.

Falling of the chin, or sagging chin muscles, are one of beauty's surest enemies. The woman with a double chin has small chance of conveying an impression for freshness and youth.

One of the surest ways of correcting this tendency is to study chin poses in the mirrow. Pull the chin up and thrust it out, so that the disfiguring roll is eliminated, then drop the chin on the chest, exaggerating the fault. By so doing a definite idea of the value of the chin elevation will be gained.

With the practical demonstration in mind, practice carrying the chin high, but not thrust forward. Draw the muscles taut and hold them so and develop the practice into a habit, which will soon become a natural pose.

When drying the face or massaging it with any kind of cream or lotion, make the hands into a V shaped trough by placing the base of the palms together, putting the chin into the V and pushing the hands gently but firmly up each side of the face to the temples. Repeat this motion at least half a dozen times a day and the excess fullness will gradually disappear. Never use downward motions in massaging any of the facial muscles, always upward. The tendency of these muscles is to fall, and downward pressure hastens this process. Pushing them upward keeps the cheeks full and prevents hollows, the certain marks of age, from appearing in the face.

Pinning a firm bandage of muslin tightly about the head, so that there will be a firm pressure under the chin during the night is a harmless and efficient aid to the foregoing treatment.

Bathrooms in Paris.

An observant English journalist in Paris has—as a hot weather amusement—made a private census of bathrooms. He calculates that in all the flats and private houses of Paris there are about 2,800 bathrooms. And this writer, lying in his own bath and making another calculation, will bet a bathful of water that he could get up and pitch a cricket ball from the garden about his modest flat this way and that over as many bathrooms. It is a curious little difference of national architecture. And the quaintness of difference comes with the fact that you see more people in London who look—yes—dirty, than in Paris. Even the beggar in Paris is clean in face, finger nails and clothes.—London Chronicle.

Crop Reports Irregular.

Bradstreet's Report says: Crop reports show spotted conditions in different crops, rendering generalization difficult. Recent rains have benefited late corn, but the early planted crop does not look so well. Short crop estimates are more in evidence. In Iowa 30 per cent. damage is reported. Late corn has been helped in eastern Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska, and the crop east of the Mississippi in the surplus states is in better shape. Nebraska reports say a full corn crop cannot now be expected in view of early drought. In the east corn is irregular, and sweet corn is high in price and low in quality.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain unclaimed at the Bellefonte post office for the last week: Mary L. Beckel, Mr. Bookwalter, Chas. Berkstresser (2), Oscar Crawford, Harry Osman, Miss Flo. Prince, Lewis R. Tryon. Persons calling for these letters will kindly explain to the postmaster that the same have been advertised in "The Republican."

To Punish Him.

"George," said her husband's wife, "I don't belive you have smoked one of those cigars I gave you on your birthday."

"That's right, my dear," replied his wife's husband; "I am going to keep them until our Willie wants to learn to smoke."

A cobra was killed when crossing a road, by a motorcar running over it. Really, cobras should be more careful while crossing roads in Willesden, where the accident occured.—The Pink 'Un.

Sounded Funny.

"Dad, can I take a postgraduate course in biology."

"That depends, daughter," replied the old man cautiously. "What do you want to by first?"

She Was a Treasure.

"The duke calls me his treasure. Do you think he really means that?"

"Why shouldn't he mean it, Mabel? You have a million dollars for him, haven't you?"

In the Future.

"The president has a military aid and a naval aid."

"That gives me an idea. I wonder if I can get appointed as his aerial aid?"

Suspicous.

A. C. Mingle has purchased the Simeon Haupt property on South Allegheny Street.

Liggett's Chocolates (nothing finer made) 40 cents and 80 cents, only at Green's.

Misses Helen Valentine and Katherine Curtin are visiting with Mrs. Margaret Burnet Burlingame, at Syracuse N. Y.

Miss Ann Confer departed today for Pittsburg, where she will visit with friends during the next week or ten days.

Mrs. Priscilla Bell tripped and fell while walking in the Union cemetery on Sunday, last, sustaining very painful bruises which have confined her to bed ever since.

Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the swimming pool at the Y. M. C. A. Contractor Lew Wallace is endeavoring to have it in readiness before September 1.

John VanPelt, who has been at Mt. Clemens, Mich., undergoing treatment for rheumatism, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Rachel Harris and apparently was greatly benefitted by his trip.

Miss Rebecca Lyon, who at one time resided in Bellefonte but who now makes her home in Philadelphia, spent several days with relatives and friends in town. She departed on Friday for Oklahoma, where she expects to remain several months.

The members of Company L, Twelfth Regiment, N. G. P., on Monday received their pay for duty at the recent Selinsgrove encampment. The amount paid out to the officers and men was $760.24. The amount paid to officers and men in the regiment was $12,367.39.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Furst, of Philadelphia, have taken a cottage for the summer at Allenhurst. Today Mrs. A. O. Furst, of this place, will go to Allenhurst for a stay of several weeks. She will be accompanied by her little grandson, John Curtin, Jr., who will have the time of his life at the seashore during the next week or ten days.

It is always a genuine pleasure to us to hear from Reuben Lucas, of Howard, one of those genial, kindly citizens who radiate sunshine in their own community. A day or two ago we were favored with a letter from Mr. Lucas, enclosing a one dollar bill and instructions to advance his subscription to "The Republican" another year. We will be more than glad to attend to it.

Lee Derstine, for quite a while right-hand man for Manager W. V. Larimer at the Palace livery, has resigned his position there and gone to Tyrone, where he is identified with the well known Stanley livery. Lee is a good, substantial young man and will "make good" in any position in which he happens to land. Before going away he made sure that he would receive all the news from home by subscribing for "The Republican."

Dr. Joseph M. Brockerhoff is making a fine improvement to the Brockerhoff House, on Allegheny Street. A modern concrete sidewalk is being laid, which will extend along the entire front of the hotel and also along the end facing the Court House diamond. While the improvement is being made he is also fitting up a room under Blair's jewelry store, with side entrance steps, the same to be used as a barber shop or restaurant.

It has often been remarked that the Lock Haven State Normal has the most attractive location of any other Normal School in the state. It has a fine climate, splendid drainage, and absolutely pure water. Epidemics are practically unknown. Its students come from every section of Pennsylvania and the spirit of the school is progressive and elevating. The fall term begins September 11th. Write for its illustrated catalog.

Miss Margaret Walsh, who several months ago went to Pittsburg, where she became a nurse in sraining on probation in the Mercy hospital, last week visited with her mother, Mrs. Julia Walsh, returning to Pittsburg on Sunday. She has satisfactorily completed her preliminary course and has been accepted as a nurse in training, this week entering upon the full course. She seemed to be delighted with her new life and surroundings and apparently is endowed with the temperament and other qualifications to achieve gratifying success as a trained nurse.

Landlord Horton S. Ray, of the Brockerhoff House, is justly proud of the hotel bus since it emerged from the shop, freshly painted and newly lettered. Since being overhauled the bus reminds one of the nobby station wagons seen at the numerous suburban points along the Pennsylvania and also the Philadelphia & Reading road running into Philadelphia. Mr. Ray figured somewhat on doing away with the bus and buying a hotel automobile. He was afraid, however, that a light-running machine of the type he desired would not stand the daily travel up and down High Street. For the present, at least, he concluded to stand by the old bus.

To look at him, one might guess his age at 65 years, but to talk with him would be to prompt one to make it along about 60. Nobody, to see or talk with John P. Harris, would suspect that he is on the very border of his eightieth milestone in life. And yet, on Saturday, last, he celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday anniversary. To him it was merely an incident, but to his numerous friends it was a happy occasion. He spent the morning hours at his desk at the Bellefonte Trust Company, as usual, and enjoyed the afternoon and evening at his home on West Linn Street. It is true that many men live to become 79 years old, but it is equally true that occasionally one is 79 years young.

The graduates of the Lock Haven State Normal School are everywhere filling important positions, not only in the public schools, but as County and City Superintendents, College Professors and in business affairs. A recent graduate was appointed during the last month as State Entomologist of Indiana at a handsome salary. He attributes much of his success to the careful training in science that he received at Lock Haven. Other students can do likewise. During the last two years, the school has been filled to its capacity and in the future the number of students will be limited in order that they may all receive individual attention. Its subject is to develop home life and to advance its young men and women morally and intellectually. Write for its handsome catalog.

Have you seen Green's Tooth Brush Window?

Miss Malot Houser, of St. Louis, Mo., is the guest of Miss Sarah Hastings.

Miss Pearl Hollis, of Harrisburg, is a guest at the Theodore Cherry home.

Misses Helen and Roxanna Mingle are enjoying an outing at Atlantic City, planning to return home next week.

John Henderson, of Philadelphia, is enioving his vacation with relatives and friends in and nearby Bellefonte.

Ezra D. Rathmell, of Hublersburg, was on Tuesday night elected a teacher in the Centennial school, Clinton County.

Mr. and Mrs. John Foulkrod, of Williamsports are being very delightfully entertained at the James Thompson home.

Paul G. Elder, a son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Elder, of Philipsburg, was recently elected borough engineer at Charleroi.

The Misses Pearl this week returned home from Philadelphia and Atlantic City, being accompanied by their niece, Mrs. Winner.

Dr. David Dale is having erected a new iron fence about the yard of his property at the corner of High and Spring Streets.

Mrs. Mary Bickel, of Zion, was this week admitted to the Lock Haven hospital, where she will undergo a surgical operation.

Miss Helen Bair, who so ably fills the clerkship in M. C. Gephart's music store, is enjoying a well earned vacation with friends in Pittsburg.

Miss Mary Saylor departed on Monday for Williamsport and Eaglesmere, at which points she will visit friends during the next month.

Miss Lona Young, of Newark, N. J., spent several days with her uncle, Andrew Young, and his family, returning home on Tuesday evening.

Edmund Hayes, for some time located in Mexico, is now engaged in business in Kansas City, Missouri. When he returns to Bellefonte he should be well qualified to say: "Show me."

As a tribute to County Commissioner Jacob Woodring, many of the officials at the Court House on Monday attended the funeral of his brother, the late Jesse Woodring, near Port Matilda.

The ladies of the Bellefonte United Brethren church will hold a festival on the Gamble & Gheen mill lawn on Saturday evening, August 12. Home-made bread, pies, cakes, candy, etc., will be on sale. All cordially invited.

The noon train for Tyrone on Tuesday was delayed several hours by a heavy freight train which had become stalled on the Eagleville hill. The passenger was behind the freight and could not pass. In moving the freight train the ends of three cars were pulled off.

There will be no services held in the Bellefonte Reformed church until Sunday, August 27. On that day, at 11 o'clock, a. m., the annual harvest home services will be held. Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt and family leave this week for a two weeks vacation at Ocean Grove.

The venerable Isaac Thomas had a narrow escape from serious injury one evening last week. He was driving along Thomas Street and in some manner was thrown out of the buggy. Fortunately he escaped being hurt, although sustaining a few bruises just by way of souvenirs.

A most cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend the porch party at the home of Mrs. Archibald Allison, on Allegheny Street, this (Thursday) evening. Home-made ice cream and cake will be sold for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church.

William Beezer was several days ago operated on for appendicitis at the Bellefonte hospital, and on Sunday his condition was such as to give his numerous friends no little concern. It will be gratifying to them to learn that he is getting along nicely and that there is every reason to anticipate a complete recovery.

Edward Steidel, of Williamsport, recently elected a teacher in physics, science and athletics for the Bellefonte High School, has informally notified the Bellefonte School Board that he will not accept. It is understood that he is asking for a higher salary than the School Board cares to pay for an instructor lacking in experience.

From far-off North Dakota "The Republican" a day or two ago received a letter enclosing a check for one dollar and instructions to enter a new subscriber upon our list. The letter was from W. R. Porte, who is identifiod with The Porte Company, at Fargo, North Dakota. During the year to come Mr. Porte is sure to receive all the news from Centre County.

The "Franklin Repository," of Chambersburg, speaks in flattering terms of a lecture delivered on Tuesday evening, at St. Thomas, near Chambersburg, by Dr. Thomas C. VanTries, of Bellefonte. Dr. VanTries gave his well known lecture, "Matters Matrimonial, or Getting Married." The lecture was under the auspices of the St. Thomas Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Joseph J. Rhoads, assistant engineer for the Middle Division, Pennsylvania Railroad, with headquarters at Altoona, spent several hours here on Monday with his sister, Miss Rebecca Rhoads, and his brother, Edward K. Rhoads. Mr. Rhoads has risen rapidly in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad and our hope is to some day soon see him promoted to the superintendency of one of the important divisions.

Mr. and Mrs John Fisher will depart on August 17 on what will undoubtedly prove to be a most delightful pleasure trip. The itinerary calls for a trip through the great lakes and a stop at Detroit, Michigan, where the annual convention of Moose will be held on August 19. John is one of the active spirits in the Bellefonte Lodge of Moose and naturally the Detroit convention will be an attraction to him of more than ordinary importance. Samuel Cherry and County Commissioner John Dunlap are the delegates to the convention from the Bellefonte lodge. J. Homer Decker, secretary of the Bellefonte lodge, is thinking of attending a meeting of secretaries of the several lodges in the United States, scheduled to be held in Detroit during the time the convention is in progress.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keller entertained on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Ross A. Hickok and daughter, Janie, are spending the week in Harrisburg.

Misses Naomi and Ruth Dixon, of Johnstown, are visiting at the Charles L. Gates home.

A 25 cent can of Pearl Tooth Powder and a tooth brush, both for 25 cents, for 1 week at Green's.

Mrs. D. H. Mingle and daughter, Miss Elizabeth Mingle, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Mingle for several weeks, returned on Wednesday to their home at Maxwell, Iowa.

Harry Levin, of Buffalo, a hustler in the matter of producing business, has been in Bellefonte for several days directing the big bankrupt sale at Claster's Underselling Store, which begins today and continues ten days.

The rather timely suggestion is made that those intending to take the special train from Bellefonte to Gettysburg on Sunday, August 13, should purchase their tickets in advance owing to the early hour fixed for the departure of the train. The train will leave at 5.30 in the morning, which is somewhat early for even the early risers.

At a meet of the ex-sheriffs and deputy sheriffs association of Centre County, on Tuesday, appropriate resolutions were adopted on the death of the late H. Y. Stitzer, who was a Deputy Sheriff under Sheriff Richard Conley, 1863 to 1866. The committee appointed to draft resolutions, a copy of which was ordered sent to the widow of the deceased, comprised D. W. Woodring, chairman; L. T. Munson, L. A. Schaeffer, W. H. Hurley and W. Miles Walker. The death of Mr. Stitzer is the first in the organization since it was formed some months ago.

A jolly party of young folks enjoyed a fine supper and corn-roast at Hecla Park on Tuesday evening, even though there was a misunderstanding in the advance arrangements. When the party arrived at the park they discovered that there was no corn on hand. Everybody knows that it is impossible to have a corn-roast without the corn, so Sidney Kiefer at once started in his automobile on a secret mission. Just where he went or what happened afterward is unknown, nevertheless it is a fact that when he returned his car was loaded down with luscious corn. In a short time the crowd were seated at a long table and the roasted corn quickly disappeared. Ben Swartz, chief operator in dispensing the rations, reported that each person ate to the fullest capacity, and that the capacity was without a limit. The evening was very delightfully spent by all, although Mrs. Harry Clevenstine, the chaperon, reported no little difficulty in keeping track of everything that happened, especially in keeping her eye on Dave Washburn, Alfred Klepfer and Edward Gates. The following were among those present: Miss Alma Posk, of Pittsburg, who is being entertained at the home of Miss Della Hurley; Misses Ruth and Naomi Dixon, of Johnstown, who are guests of Miss Winifred Gates; William Weiler and Maurice Swartzbaugh, of New York, guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clevenstine; Misses Edna Kuntz, Keturah Rider, Lydia Miller, Helen Robb, Bella Johnson, Florence Lamb, Hazel Johnson, Winifred Gates, Inez Cronemiller, Grace Blackford, Carrie Miller, Pearl Blackford, Pearl Rover, Della Hurley, Bella Lowry, Catharine Willard and Pearl Knisely, and Messrs Sidney Kiefer, Herbert Gray, Alfred Klepfer, Benjamin Swartz, Norman Kirk, Ralph Cole, David Washburn, Edward L. Gates, Lester Meek, Van Jodon, Trude Bidwell Melvin Willard, Charles Gates and J. H. Decker.

THAT OLD AUTO SIGN

Council Revokes its Right to be Up, but Dr. Sebring Merely Laughs.

Dr. John P. Sebring's automobile garage sign that is so objectionable to Dr. J. L. Seibert on Monday night bobbed up to produce more free advertising for the Sebring garage. It afforded a job for three lawyers, two against the sign and one in its favor, and no end of worry and concern for the Bellefonte Council. Council, with a resolution of a more or less melancholy tune, voted unanimously to rescind its previous action granting Dr. Sebring permission to erect the sign. Dr. Sebring learned of the adoption of the resolution and announced that so far as he knew the sign would not come down.

Officially, that is officially so far as Council is concerned, Dr. Sebring has no permission to erect a sign. Dr. Sebring humorously says that he is not asking such permission, that he asked for it, got it, put up the sign—and there you are. Council having granted the permission cannot revoke it, says Dr. Sebring, and apparently the sign is destined to loom up in court before the august gaze of Judge Orvis and propound the tantalizing question: "Where am I at."

Lawyers John Blanchard and W. Harrison Walker represented Dr. Seibert, who also was present. Lawyer William D. Zerby appeared as counsel for Dr. Sebring. There was some talk of possible damage suits and the ever-troublesome point whether Council, having once granted the permission to do a certain thing, could revoke its action. For Dr. Seibert it was pointed out that Council could, of course, revoke its action. For Dr. Sebring it was argued that Council could not, of course, do any such a thing.

Even though it was an extremely hot night, Council greatly enjoyed the flow of oratory. Whether they could or couldn't revoke the permission Council nevertheless proceeded to adopt a resolution revoking it. Councilman Paul D. Sheffer, the champion of the Sebring sign, was not at the meeting and not a single voice was raised in its defense.

Gets Into Fast Company.

Smoyer, shortstop on the Clearfield baseball club, has been signed up to play with the New York Americans next year. He has frequently played before Bellefonte crowds.

THINK THIS OVER.

You say you can make more from your surplus than a life insurance policy will make for you.

How much comfort of mind will your "increased earnings" bring you when you are ill and face the question of your family's needs?

Mental worry and illness combined speeds death.

Mental ease contributes to longevity.

A Royal Union policy is the greatest balm in the world for that feeling of uncertainty about your family's future if you are no longer here to provide for them, and for the time when age will impair your activity. No policy is better secured or yields a better return to its holder than the ones issued by the Royal Union.
